HYPOCRISY AND DECEIT

Of Democratic Leader Denounced In the Words of Senator Hoar.

HANNA'S SPEECH AT DELPHI

A Note of Warning Against Over-Confidence on Part of Republicans An Enthusiastic Greeting.

Delphi Ind Sept. 15—Senator Hanna addressed the Republicans of the Ninth congressional district tonight A large crowd had assembled at the railroad station to meet him and a procession escorted the senator to the court house square, where he addressed an audience of about 6 000 people. He said

Only a few weeks ago I felt that there was lacking on the part of the people of this country a full apprecia at the importance of the issues of this campaign I spent six long hot weeks in New York laying the founda tion of the campaign in the east and [illegible] from the fact that the peo ple were over confident [illegible] to be a lack of interest and it was discouraging to those of us who were charged with the responsibilities of the work But coming west I stopped over a day or two in my native state of Ohio and in the opening of the campaign at Youngstown I met such an audience as this and looking into their faces I discovered that there was a response in the western Republicans that meant that this campaign must be started in the west this heart of Republican interest this center of the population of the country composed of the stalwart element of our people Therefore I say that looking into the faces of this audience I am encouraged to go on and say a few words regarding the issues which confront us

Bryan's Responsibility

After speaking of the attitude of the opposing candidates as to financial matters and the Philippine insurrection Senator Hanna referring to the remarks of a previous speaker said

Colonel Posey has told you exactly the truth that the position of the Democratic party upon the Philippine question was made and fixed up in the city of Washington by Mr Bryan and his close advisers themselves I was there about that time I knew what was going on I could see by the evidences when that question was discussed in the senate after seeing Mr Bryan day after day in the corridors and ante rooms and away from his influence that he had said that that treaty must be passed and it was passed While those of us who had the pleasure and enjoyed the right of voting from principle and of sustaining the strong arm of the administration working from the standpoint of duty felt that we had taken a prominent part in that glorious act of ratifying the treaty and saving the honor and integrity of the American navy and American army and upholding the American people still for all that we were not numerically strong enough to have accomplished that purpose if it had not been for the cohorts of Mr Bryan Did he and his cohorts act from the same motives which inspired the Republican members of that senate? No I am ashamed to say no because we knew the purposes he had in view were purely political and intended to be used just as they have been used to make an issue possibly a paramount issue but at least a collateral issue in the coming campaign And that has been the result

Senator Hoar's Denunciation

I will quote the words of one of the most eminent statesmen in the United States a man against whose motives or patriotism no word can be said a man who from the convictions of his principles has been honestly opposed to the policy of the administration regarding the Philippines. I quote from Senator Hoar of Massachusetts Standing in the presence of 20 or 30 prominent business men in Boston a month ago I was present at that gathering It was an informal meeting considering the political questions of the campaign and we asked Senator Hoar for his views That grand old man arose and laboring under the solemnity and as he felt the importance of that occasion felt that he had been almost estranged from his party and from his president and yet strong under his own convictions that had rooted within him in a lifetime, he said

Gentlemen you all know that I have not been in harmony with my party up [illegible] the Philippine question but that is only one of the many important questions and as I [illegible] my party stands upon the foundation the principles of which was the beginning and baptism of its life I shall stand by my party

But' he said I propose to tear the mask from the face of that hypocrite William J Bryan (Applause) I call him a hypocrite because like my friend Senator Lodge and Senator Hanna I know the motive which inspired the action on his part to ratify the treaty You told me then but I could hardly believe it was true and I now see that it was true and that he is acting the part of a consummate hypocrite in all his advocacy of the opposition to the president on that question

Those were the words of Senator Hoar of Massachusetts the grandest old man in the senate a man whose whole life and energies have been devoted to the principles of the Republican party and therefore no one would dare to doubt for one single moment the motives of that man And I repeat it here and I will repeat it from every rostrum where I have the opportunity that the action of Mr Bryan and those who are following him in his contest on this Philippine question has been one of hypocrisy and deceit from the beginning and will continue so to be" (Applause)

The latter part of Senator Hanna's speech was devoted to industrial affairs, the senator setting forth figures showing present conditions as compared with conditions of trade previous to the inauguration of President McKinley

A Note of Warning.

In conclusion he said

I feel that if anything could induce me to appear before audiences of my fellow citizens it would be not to sound the keynote but to sound a note of warning I am not surprised that the people of the United States should feel comfortable under the present conditions of things, but I don't want them to be surprised if they find that their over-confidence results in the defeat of our ticket I tell you my friends that I do want to sound a note of warning There is evidence on all sides in our country that the Republican party feels that it has a sure thing that William McKinley will be re-elected and therefore they do not feel called upon to exert any extraordinary effort to contribute their share toward preventing it This is a duty as sacred to every man as the duty that he owes to his family and his God It is a duty that he can not shift He cannot shift the responsibility of it upon the shoulders of his neighbor He cannot excuse himself for not performing that duty by attempting to console himself with the idea that somebody else will do his work

At the conclusion of his address Senator Hanna was cheered to the echo

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT'S NORTH DAKOTA SPEECHES

Bismarck N D Sept 15—The Roosevelt special train arrived at Bismarck at [illegible] o'clock today and remained here during the night This place is familiar to Gov Roosevelt and he met many of his cowboy friends at the station Among them were some who had been with him on his ranch A street demonstration had been prepared in his honor consisting of a parade and fireworks in the evening together with a reception by the citizens Gov Roosevelt spoke in the evening at the Atheneum to an overflowing crowd After relating some reminiscences of his cowboy days here in this town he spoke of the financial question dwelling upon the general prosperity of the country under McKinley's administration and then discussed the Philippine question much as he has in other speeches during the present trip

Speaking of the trust issue he said Of course when prosperity comes it comes to the unjust as well as the just and exactly as hard times strikes a decent man it also strikes a man that is not decent There has been much complaint against President McKinley and his administration because trusts have flourished They did not flourish four years ago Nothing flourished four years ago

We have had four years of going forward Now abuses are sure to come [illegible] get rid of those abuses We have had a little experiment of that kind in my own state Now two years ago I ran for governor in New York Against me they had put up Judge Van Wyck who was a special protege of Mr Bryan and a bosom friend of Mr Croker (Laughter and applause)

You seem to have heard of the gentleman Now, Mr Croker and Mr Van Wyck were very severe upon corporations They said they were down on corporations that they were against them I said I was no more against corporations than I was against [illegible] headed man I will do justice to the red-headed man If he is a bad man I will cinch him If he is a good man I will stand by him If a corporation does its duty and acts squarely it is all right and I will stand up for it If it don't do so I will make it do its duty if I have the power Now, you see I have the advantage of talking the way I did because I could keep my promise I made the kind of promises that could be kept We got a law enacted There are defects in it of course but the result so far has been that we have put upon the assessment roll for taxation something like $200,000 000 of corporate property that has previously escaped taxation That was something tangible You never can accomplish everything at once

AT VALLEY CITY

Jamestown N D Sept 15—At Valley City Governor Roosevelt spoke at the opera house which was filled to overflowing Senator Hansbrough presided and introduced the governor who said in part

We have the right to appeal to all men who are indeed Americans to uphold the policy that tells for national greatness We stand at the threshold of a new century We begin that century as one of the greatest nations of the world standing in the forefront If we are true to ourselves we shall establish for this nation during the century to come a record unequalled in the history of mankind but it can only be done by facing each task as it comes and not flinching from it

In order to keep his engagement in Montana Governor Roosevelt's train will continue its journey Sunday, but there will positively be no speech making This country from Mandan to Miles City is the country Governor Roosevelt used to roam with his cattle and where many of his old cowboy friends still live and where he was once a peace officer It is a matter of deep regret on the part of the governor that he is thus compelled to pass through this familiar territory in this summary way but circumstances have made it necessary Not only will there be no speaking but the train will not be allowed to pass through any village during the hour in which religious services are in progress

NEWS TOPICS IN EUROPE

Great Interest But Little Knowledge of the Chinese Problem.

WATCHING RUSSIA'S MOVES

Observers Are Prepared for a Change of Plans General Election In England Expected Soon.

(Copyright 1900 the Associated Press)

London Sept 15—Lord Salisbury is back at his post Sir Chih Chen Lo Feng Luh the Chinese minister had a conference at the foreign office yesterday with Lord Salisbury The United States German French and Russian representatives were also there yet not one of the great London dailies has a word of editorial comment on the subject that is uppermost in the thoughts of the world's diplomats It is a striking example of [illegible] completely befogged is the public of every European nation with regard to the purpose of their representatives

The Associated Press however hears from circles in close touch with the foreign office that a definite exposition of [illegible] of the powers may be expected early next week together with some inkling as to how it is to attain the objects in view but that at present the main point of discussion continues to be the question whether the powers shall or shall not evacuate Peking

Postponement or Compromise

This it is reasserted is already provisionally settled negatively by Great Britain and Germany who are hopeful of gaining the united adhesion of the powers to a temporary postponement of the scheme In the opinion of diplomatists the way has been somewhat cleared for the accomplishment of this by the recent notes from St Petersburg explaining that Russia's real intent is widely different from the meaning deduced from the text of the original proposal as intimating that Russia may compromise

Considerable importance is attached to the semi-official statement that Russia recognizes the impossibility of the allies leaving Peking unless the Chinese government immediately enters so that there shall be no interval without a government Additional confirmation of this view is found in the fact that Russia has resumed sending forces to China This is entirely contrary to the supposed spirit of the Russian note and prepares observers for a change of plans after the apparent failure of the policy favored in the original note

Officials in London [illegible] the carping complaints of the Russophobes though they are fully alive to the possibility of a Muscovite move in some unexpected quarter and perhaps also some surprise from Germany. They point out that many allegations of intrigue, founded on the most trivial incidents and others like the report that Li Hung Chang is traveling under the protection of Russia alone have already been disproven They deprecate he attempts to manufacture international friction from such petty causes

General Election

Lord Salisbury's return to England has [illegible] date of the general election Nobody outside the premier's political surrounding knows the date of the dissolution but the kingdom will be in the throes of an election during the course of a few days A proclamation dissolving parliament will in all probability be signed at the council which the queen will hold at Balmoral Monday It is likely that the date determined upon will be S p 25

President Krueger's arrival at Delagoa Bay will suffice as a basis for the British government to assert that the war is over and the conservatives will appeal to a presumed grateful nation on what is known here as the "khaki issue" in other words the military issue There is keen and increasing activity everywhere on both sides but the staunchest party newspapers admit that the Liberals will enter the struggle leaderless and disunited and in a general state of confusion practically precluding success To add to the misfortunes of the Liberal party physicians have peremptorily ordered John Morley on account of throat trouble to refrain from all speechmaking for several months The Liberals thus on the eve of election are deprived of the services of one of their most able orators

GERMAN ATTITUDE

Present Situation In China Unsatisfactory But Not Critical.

(Copyright 1900 the Associated Press)

Berlin Sept 15—The Chinese situation is here deemed to be highly unsatisfactory and most complicated though no sensational events are immediately expected and isolated action upon the part of any one power is not anticipated According to the opinion here all the interested powers are too firmly convinced of the importance of continued harmony and solidarity to jeopardize them when no necessity calls for it It is expected in Berlin that neither Russia nor France will withdraw their troops hurriedly from Peking and it is believed the United States will not be in any great hurry

Information has reached this city that Russia in any event will keep large bodies of troops in China not only in the frontier provinces of Mongolia, Manchuria and Kirin, but also in the interior and the coast districts of Pe-chi li The military commanders of the allied forces have agreed that under the circumstances it is necessary to strengthen the tactical and strategical position of the international forces in Pe-chi li Russia too will finish the railroad from Yang tsun to Peking

German Attitude

Regarding Germany's attitude she will in any case insist on severe punishment being inflicted on the treacherous Chinese authorities to which purpose the confession of Baron Von Ketteler's assassin came opportunely Germany will not accept Ying Lu as a peace negotiator if the charges made against Yung Lu that he led the attacks against the Peking legations are proved But Germany though her foreign office insist on the principle of severe punishment does not oppose peace with China as was shown yesterday by Dr Mumm Von Schwarzenstein [illegible] German minister to China accepting Li Hung Chang's visit at Shanghai

The German papers are filled with mail correspondence from China mostly describing in detail events until shortly before the march upon Peking All the letters agree in saying that Germany was the only power not permitting looting and maintaining the strictest discipline

The Government Loan

The papers nearly all condemn the placing of the German loan in the United States as calculated to humiliate the nation The Vossiche Zeitung publishes figures showing the imperial government had 140 000 000 marks on hand and says

Why then borrow abroad thus putting Germany on a par with Russia and smaller and less moneyed countries? The empire would not have found it difficult to raise the amount here without the aid of any bank.

The Boersen Courier Boersen Zeitung and Cologne Volks Zeitung express themselves similarly

The correspondent of the Associated Press learns authoritatively however that German government circles have been most agreeably impressed by the manner in which the German loan has been taken up in the United States

Only an Installment

A London paper statement that this cause the government placed the 20 000 000 marks is disbelieved here

The correspondent of the Associated Press called the Reichsbank's officials attention to the statement and they refused to deny it A report of Dr Miquel the minister of finance emphatically denied it It is understood that the German government's motive in placing the loan in America was the Berlin High Finance's disaffection because the government placed the 80 000 000 loan of 1899 through a single bank

The government wanted to show High Finance that it is independent [illegible]

The American colonies of Leipsic, Dresden and Stuttgart have called meetings to raise funds for the Texas sufferers

A meeting of Americans has been held at the United States embassy here in aid of the Texas sufferers Resolutions of sympathy were passed and 2 000 marks were subscribed A committee consisting of Secretary Jackson Rev Dr Dickie and Deputy Consul General Frederick Von Versen were appointed to solicit further subscriptions

WASHINGTON VIEW OF THE RUSSIAN INTENTION

Washington Sept 15—M De Wollant the Russian charge d'affaires, was in Washington today for the first time since he delivered to the state department the [illegible] proposal for the evacuation of Peking He did not call at the state department and his return was not regarded as significant as he is moving his family from the seashore to the mountains The Russian officials in this country have received no communication bearing on the Chinese situation since that relating to the evacuation and so far as they are informed there is no change in Russia's attitude

The view prevails that the proposition itself made clear that Russia had ordered her minister and troops to withdraw and that no further orders in that respect are necessary, the only requirement being that the minister, M De Giers shall consult with his colleagues and adopt means by which the withdrawal will not be accompanied by any inconvenience to other forces There has been no official confirmation of the reports that Russia had presented an ultimatum for the restoration of the emperor, the displacement of the empress dowager and the severe punishment of Prince Tuan

The first impression among officials here was that such a course was inconsistent with Russia policy, which has [illegible] empress dowager but viewed from the Russian standpoint it appears that such a course might be entirely in harmony with the present Russia view According to this view the present uprising is a rebellion pure and simple and is not a war Being viewed as a rebellion it is said that if the Russian commanders became satisfied that the empress dowager was responsible for the internal convulsion she doubtless [illegible] notwithstanding any previous favorable inclination of hers

BOERS' LAST APPEAL

The Hague Sept 15—The Boer delegates Messrs Fischer Wolmarans and Wessels have addressed an appeal to all nations for intervention in South Africa They express the conviction that the annexation of the Transvaal was only [illegible] with the object of enabling Great Britain to prosecute the war in inhuman manner [illegible] morelessly [illegible] as rebels exhausted combatants hitherto recognized as belligerents

VENEZUELA CONDITIONS

American Capital is Entering the Country in Increasing Quantities—A Period of Prosperity

Washington Sept 15—Frank Loomis United States minister to Venezuela has arrived in Washington on leave of absence from his post Mr Loomis says that when he left Venezuela the country was perfectly quiet so far as political conditions were concerned

Commercially there has been a slight improvement in affairs and the rising price of coffee promises a period of great prosperity

American capital he says is going in Venezuela in increasing quantities One organization has just undertaken to supply Caracas the capital of the country with illuminating and heating gas manufactured at the seaport of La Guayra 17 miles distant Gas coal in Caracas costs $12 a ton at sea level the price is $4, hence the projected pipe line Another American enterprise under consideration is the erection of electric light plants at La Guayra to light Caracas by long distance transmission of power

Mr Loomis says that the conditions across the line in Colombia are [illegible] leads in confusion and this has affected business unfavorably

[illegible] Loomis left Caracas the two commissioners appointed to [illegible] limit the boundary line in the disputes between Venezuela and Great Britain and Venezuela and Colombia arrived and entered upon their work It is believed Mr Loomis said that under the award of 1896 when Spain acted as arbitrator between Venezuela and Colombia that Venezuela will lose almost one seventh of her territory being almost the entire strip of country west of the Rio Negro

IMP WON

Second Special at Gravesend With Kinley Mack Second

New York Sept 15—Imp the black whirlwind the popular idol of regular and casual race goers alike won the second special at Gravesend today amidst the wildest enthusiasm with the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicap winner Kinley Mack the mighty Ethelbert and the good three year old McMeekin behind her Ethelbert was a hot favorite backed down from even money to [illegible] to 10 McMeekin was second choice at 8 to 5 Kinley Mack was held at 5 to 1 while Imp was the outsider opening and closing at [illegible] although there was a little 8 and 3 to 1 against her at times

A third break was acceptable to the starter and he sent them off for the mile and a half journey Imp broke last but Burns quickly brought her to the front and she showed the way down past the grand stand with Kinley Mack McMeekin and Ethelbert lengths apart behind her Burns let her race along at her own pace and there was no change in the order around the first turn and up the back stretch At the end of the mile McMeekin rounded up a little and Turner on Ethelbert was beginning to ride with his hands to keep his mount up On the far turn Kinley Mack and McMeekin both showed up to the black mare but Burns let out a wrap and Imp showed the way into the stretch with everything driving behind her McMeekin challenged her resolutely when straightened out but soon dropped back beaten and it was left for Kinley Mack and Ethelbert to fight it out with her Both boys rode desperately with whip and spur but in vain and the wire was passed with Imp a length in front of Kinley Mack who was a neck before Ethelbert McMeekin third Time 2 34 1 5

THE STRIKE HAS BEGUN

Reports Indicate a Severe Struggle In Anthracite Regions.

NUMEROUS MINERS' MEETINGS

Speakers Counseled Quiet, Orderly Conduct on the Part of the Men--Claims of Strength.

Philadelphia Sept 15—The much talked of strike of the anthracite mine workers in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, under the auspices of the United Mine Workers of America and which affects about 14 000 union and non union workers was practically begun today and reports received from the various sections indicate that on Monday morning when the strike officially begins according to the strike order issued by President Mitchell of the Mine Workers union very few of the collieries will be in operation

Just how many men will obey the strike order can only be conjectured The union officials steadfastly assert that all the union men will remain away from work and will be further strengthened by a large majority of [illegible] union men

The operators on the other hand are confident that the proportion of striking miners has been greatly exaggerated Monday morning alone can tell which is correct

The situation tonight is practically one of strike Reports from Luzerne Lackawanna Schuylkill Carbon and Northumberland counties where the most important coal workings are presage a struggle between the operators and their men that many fear may lead to disturbance and perhaps worse The men in several collieries in Luzerne decided today to continue at work for several days longer because of an agreement made several years ago to discuss all grievances with the company and allow 10 days in which to effect a settlement on all points of difference

Tonight all is quiet Miners meetings were held at a number of points and the speakers counseled quiet, orderly conduct on the part of the men

That some of the operators are preparing for work is indicated by their fencing in and stringing barbed wire [illegible] The union [illegible] [illegible] men to the sheriff of Luzerne county to guard the mining properties

The only workers not included in the strike order are engineers firemen barn bosses and pump runners These respectively take care of the machinery and the mules and keep the mines from flooding

GALVESTON'S NEED

Hard, Cold Cash the Greatest Necessity at the Present Time.

Galveston Texas Sept. 15—Every hour brings Galveston nearer to normal conditions and the improvement of each day shows a decided gain over the preceding It will be weeks and possibly months before the city will be in good running shape but matters are fast rounding into a condition which compared with the chaos in the early part of the week, is comfort and happiness

The great need of the city at present is money—not subscriptions but cold hard cash It is needed in every direction and for a multitude of purposes The most important of these is to pay the men who are cleaning up the streets

A Plain Statement

Adjutant Scurry said today

There's not a dollar to pay the men who are working in the streets all day long I am not able to say to a single one of those men You shall be paid for your work We must have this city cleaned up at any cost and with the greatest speed possible If it is not done with all haste and at the same time done well there may be a pestilence and if it once breaks out here it will not be Galveston alone that will suffer Such things spread and it is not only for the sake of this city but for others outside of this place that I urge that above all things we want money

Of all the poor people here not one has anything A majority of them could not furnish a single room in which to commence housekeeping even though they had the money to rebuild the room Those people have absolutely nothing except what is given them by the relief committee They are in a condition [illegible] everything and save for the splendid generosity of the nation they would be utterly without hope

Water Abundant.

The city water which was turned on yesterday afternoon for a short time was on again this morning in full force and it will remain on from now on The water works never badly damaged have been put into a condition that affords an abundant supply of good water on every hand The mains were thoroughly flushed this morning and for several hours the hydrants played into the gutters the effect being one of great importance Ever since the storm there has been a mass of dark foul smelling slime over parts of all the streets and its presence was a menace to public health as long as it was allowed to exist This has now been almost entirely cleared away and the intense odor that filled the city during the early part of the week has, in consequence been greatly abated

The work of burning bodies is still going on they being hurried to the fires as soon as possible after being [illegible] All of last night and all of today there were numerous fires along the shore and in every one of them were from three to 20 bodies There is no longer the slight attempt at identification No effort is made to ascertain whether the body is that of white or colored person. All of them have been so long in the water under a blazing sun that it would be exceedingly difficult to determine the identity of any body unless by the clothing and in most cases the bodies are destitute of garments

Pull them out of the water as [illegible] seen and threw them into the [illegible] as soon as taken from the water is the order and it is effectually carried out.

Estimate of the Dead

The residents of Galveston are of the opinion that there are more dead than the outsiders coming in are generally willing to admit It is beyond all possibility that any actual count will ever be had but the best evidence obtainable and allowing for those bodies which have been cast up by the water after being once thrown into the gulf and twice counted and for the number that were carried to sea and will never be heard a total list of the dead cannot be far from 3 000 The people of Galveston say that they know that it will amount to anything between 5 000 and 10 000 and the estimates for the most part will be in the neighborhood of those large figures

All up and down the coast there has been loss of life that will not be learned of for weeks and months if ever The total number of dead from the storm in this state cannot be far from 4 000

Shore Line Changed

The residents of Galveston are plucky in the extreme in their determination to rebuild and make Galveston a greater and better city than it has ever been before but in one direction at least they have suffered a loss that is beyond repair and that lies in the extent of the territory wrested from them by the storm The waters of the gulf now cover 5 000 000 square feet of ground that was formerly a part of Galveston This loss has been suffered entirely on the south side of the city where the finest residences were built facing the gulf and where land was held at a higher valuation than in any other part of the city with the exception of the business district

For three miles along the shore of the gulf this choice residence property extended but the shore line was so changed by the storm that at low tide the water is 300 feet higher along the entire three miles In the eastern part of the city there are places where 350 feet is less than the actual amount of ground taken from the city It is a fair estimate however, for the entire distance The foundation pillars of the Beach hotel now stand in the water Before the storm there was a beach in front of the hotel site nearly 400 feet wide There is no possibility of any of this land being reclaimed.

MAGNIFICENT GREETING TO MR. BRYAN IN ST. LOUIS

St Louis Sept 15—A less experienced man than William J Bryan might very well have had his head turned by the reception accorded him in St Louis tonight He spoke here at Coliseum hall under the auspices of the National Democratic League of Commercial Travelers The hall is said to seat 14 000 people Not only was every seat occupied but every available [illegible] standing room was also covered There were no vacancies anywhere when the hour for calling the meeting to order arrived but other persons continued to seek admission for some time afterward

Mr Bryan was late in arriving at the hall having been detained in his attendance upon a meeting of the Knights and Ladies of Honor at Concordia Park where he also made a brief address Mr Bryan had arrived in the city about 5 o'clock coming here from East St Louis He was escorted across the Mississippi by a committee of the Commercial Travelers, who met him in the Illinois city They brought him in to this city in a carriage drawn by four cream white horses and followed by 20 other carriages all drawn by white horses and accompanied by a mounted guard and a large squad of police From the time the cavalcade crossed the long bridge the reception began The streets were crowded and many flags floated from the buildings. There were occasional cheers and altogether the street greeting was at least a fair index of what the real reception was to be The carriages were all decorated in the national colors and the [illegible] an impressive appearance

The time previous to Mr Bryan's arrival at the Coliseum was filled by other speakers among them Webster Davis There were alternate cheers and hisses while Mr Davis was [illegible] ing and at times the scene was exciting

Mr Bryan arrived at 8 45 and the audience rose almost as one man to greet him as he strode across the [illegible] A vast majority of the multitude was equipped with small American flags and they waved them with a will The demonstration continued for five or six minutes and it was in some [illegible] a repetition of the flag episode in the Kansas City convention Mr [illegible] read his speech from manuscript The points of the address [illegible] when made and the entire [illegible] was well received

Mr Bryan covered in his [illegible] St. Louis speech only ground that he [illegible] previously traversed. NEWS TOPICS FROM DENVER

Arrangements to Escort Governor Roosevelt.

SAN JUAN DEMOCRATIC CASE

Nominations of Theron Stevens for District Judge and S. G. McMullen for District Attorney Confirmed.

Denver Bureau
Colorado Springs Gazette.

Denver, Sept. 15.—Chairman Hartzell of the Republican county central committee has perfected arrangements for meeting Vice Presidential Candidate Roosevelt at Cheyenne with a special train occupied by members of the party from Denver, and to have the special car attached to that train and hauled from Cheyenne "Around the Horn," stopping at the principal towns long enough for his delivery of addresses from the rear platform. He is to be at Cheyenne September 24 and the itinerary of his journey to Denver from that city will, under this programme, be for the 25th. It will include stops at Greeley, Fort Collins, Loveland, Boulder and Brighton.

San Juan Contests.

The nominations of Theron Stevens for district judge and S. G. Mullen for district attorney by the Democrats of the seventh district have been confirmed by the secretary of state. M. B. Gerry and John T. Barnett filed their certification as candidates for these offices first, but at the hearing yesterday Secretary Beckwith decided against them on the ground that they had consumed too much time in presenting their testimony, thus causing the case to run over the limit, forty eight hours, allowed by law. Gerry and Barnett will take an appeal to the supreme court where a hard fight is promised before the contest is settled. Both the democratic factions in the San Juan are deeply interested in the outcome of this case.

The Camp Bird Deal.

A telegram received at the Brown Palace hotel tonight announcing that John Hayes Hammond would arrive in Denver in the morning. It is expected that he will remain in Denver only a very short time and then hurry on to the Camp Bird mine, where he is to make a final expert examination for London investors. The price, $5,000,000 which it is rumored the mine would be sold for, is now said to be incorrect, and present rumors fix the sale at $12,000,000 or over.

Ex-Mayor Joseph C. Bates is dangerously ill at his residence, 1240 York street, and is not expected to survive the night. Last week his wife died and subsequently Mr. Bates had a paralytic stroke from which he does not appear to rally.

Another Disappearance.

M. W. Robinson of Kansas City, who came to Denver several months ago, is missing. In March he wrote his sister, Mrs. Ella Corsen of Los Angeles, not to write him again until he sent his Denver address.

His relatives have not heard from him since. Patrick W. Marley of Green River, Wyo., who disappeared from home in September, '99, and is believed to be mentally unbalanced, is supposed to be in some Colorado institution. His wife is searching for him.

Buying Up Coal.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron company is buying all the coal available in the open market. The company is contemplating a long siege of the strike in the east and is preparing itself against a famine.

W. N. McAllister has just received word from his brother in Galveston that the brother is still alive. He was in his engine when the flood came and he clung to it for fourteen hours when he was finally rescued.

Martin Pusich, a laborer employed in the Globe smelter, was crushed between two cars on the scale track of the smelter at 5:30 o'clock yesterday evening. The young man's back was broken and was terribly crushed. Death resulted from the injuries at St. Joseph's hospital at 9:45 o'clock last night.

Burlington Flyers.

The fast train service on the Burlington railroad will not be discontinued. Instead, it is said another flyer will be added to the already large number now being run across the state.

A horse and buggy, belonging to W. Ryan, was stolen from the Curtis Park livery yesterday morning. A reward has been offered for the recovery of the rig.

A move is on foot to move the Denver Orphans home from its present location to a spot where more room could be obtained for the children to play in. It is thought that the present site could be sold for enough to secure larger quarters farther out.

I. E. Hibbey from Salesburg has applied to the governor for a pardon. He was recently convicted of cattle stealing. He claims error in his conviction.

Mrs. T. C. Boyer, an old and respected citizen of Denver, passed away last evening. She was 67 years old and had been a resident of this city for a long period of years.

Opposition to Coates.

As predicted in yesterday morning's Gazette there is a strong likelihood that D. C. Coates will not be acceptable to the Democrats for lieutenant governor. Opposition to Coates was started during his nomination by a delegate from Pueblo who claimed that Coates was a Democrat instead of a Populist. The Populist convention as a body was void of leadership or decision, only as Mr. Patterson swung them with his oratory and it was his speech that downed Caldwood.

The list of the fusion nominees were filled with the exception of lieutenant governor. That place was left vacant pending the decision of the Democratic executive committee. There is a strong sentiment against Coates because it is charged that he was largely responsible for Pueblo county going Republican last fall. Mr. Patterson is the only one of the fusion leaders who is satisfied.

A few weeks ago Mr. Coates was working hand in hand with the Democrats and no one seems to know when he changed to be a Populist while Mr. Caldwood has always been a staunch supporter of Populism. But the objection to the ticket does not stop with the lieutenant governorship by any means.

The objection is raised against Mr. Orman that he employs non-union men. Objection is also made because Denver and Pueblo got all the offices. When the Democratic executive committee meets on September 22, a strong plea will be made with them to turn down Mr. Coates and place Justice Goddard in his place.

Should this occur Governor Thomas will then have won his anti-fusion scheme and the three parties will walk to defeat alone.

The Messages of the Heralds

Prophesy the autumn fashions! The national demand comes to us from villa, cottage and summer hotel. It echoes from the surf, floats down from the mountain. Popular demand asks, "Ready?" Our echo, "Ready!"

Box Jackets, Driving Coats, Golf Capes of Novel Stuffs, Princess Gowns.

High elaboration marks the dress thought of the period. Matron or Belle homeward bound from Colorado, from summer pleasure, loses the latest point of interest by failing first to visit The Big Store.

REPUBLICANS OF BOULDER COUNTY

Held an Enthusiastic County Convention.

GAMBLE FOR STATE SENATOR

Thompson of Longmont, Carruthers of Lafayette and Crook of Eldora Named for Representatives.

Special to the Gazette:

Boulder, Sept. 14.—The Republican county convention was held today in the city for the purpose of nominating a ticket.

It was an exceedingly large and enthusiastic body of Republicans which greeted Chairman Gamble, as he called the convention to order this morning. H. B. Millard of Boulder was promptly elected temporary chairman and George W. Johnson of Longmont, secretary. A committee on credentials and one on permanent organization were then appointed, and while the convention awaited the report of these committees Hon. R. H. Whitely was called upon for a speech. The orator's remarks were terse and logical from start to finish.

He particularly emphasized the statement that if the Republicans of Boulder county only wanted to, they could carry the ticket by working for it. Mr. Whitely was followed by H. M. Minor of Longmont. Mr. Minor was a Populist at one time until, he says, "Populism became swallowed up in fusionism." The speaker then showed how the fusion parties had run the state into debt and then tried to get out again by taxing the farmers with exorbitant water rights and the cattlemen likewise for cattle branding. At the mention of Hiram McKinley's name the applause and enthusiasm which followed was tremendous. The speaker closed by saying that he thought that if the Republicans worked hard this year they could carry the state by 25,000.

After the port of the committee on credentials had on permanent organization, and the appointment of a committee to set delegates for state, district and judicial conventions, the assembly adjourned to 1:30 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

There being no objection to the report of the committee to select delegates, nominations for state senator were announced. The name of Harry P. Gamble was immediately placed in nomination by Jas. Henderson, whereupon the convention rose into applause and further showed their approval by unanimously electing him for the position.

J. B. Thoson of Longmont, John Carruthers, Lafayette and Ed. N. Crook of Eldora were then nominated as state representatives. T. C. Johnson was chosen for county commissioner, and A. J. Chase for the office of county surveyor. In closing resolutions were adopted congratulating President McKinley for those ideas that enhance the prosperity of our people" and testifying appreciation of the labors of Hon. E. O. Wolcott in congress. A pledge was also acted, promising a business administration of the public affairs intrust to the various offices. The convention then adjourned.

THE NEWS OF CRIPPLE CREEK

Democrats and Populists Failed to Effect Fusion.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

Montgomery, Hollenbeck and Rohde the Nominees—James L. Wallace Rejected By Democrats

Cripple Creek Bureau
Colorado Springs Gazette.

Cripple Creek, Sept. 15.—The representative convention of the Democratic party met at 2 o'clock in the district court room this afternoon, and nominated as candidates for representatives in the legislature, Col. B. F. Montgomery of this city, C. W. Hollenbeck of Victor and W. E. Rohde of Colorado Springs. Another effort was made to fuse with the Peoples party, which ended in practical failure.

After the meeting was called to order today the question of reconsidering the action of last night came up in which the order of fusion had been practically abandoned. After a long discussion, in which the most prominent members of the convention took part, it was decided to reappoint the same conference committee to call upon the Peoples party for the purpose of fusion. The Peoples party also were more in favor of making the fusion than yesterday and were willing to unite with the Democratic party provided that party would concede them one representative. Yesterday they wanted two. They, however, wanted to name the candidate. The candidate they named was James L. Wallace, who was not satisfactory to the conference committee of the Democrats.

Accordingly the committee reported the result of the conference to the convention recommending that instead of Wallace, W. E. Rohde be placed on the ticket. The report was adopted by the convention, the committee being discharged. This was practically accepting Rohde as a candidate. He was nominated also in the convention of the people party last evening.

Will Not Accept Rohde.

The People party, however, will not accept Rohde as the fusion candidate, notwithstanding he was nominated in their own convention yesterday. They wanted Wallace on the ticket, and as the Democrats would not accept him, they now declare that they will pull Rohde off their own ticket.

The Populist party in this district is composed chiefly of labor union people. They have no objections to Col. Montgomery as one of the candidates, but they did want James W. Gaughan, representative on the ticket, as a member of the Democratic party. They also wanted Wallace on the ticket as a representative of the Peoples party and as the fusion candidate. While both Rohde and Hollenbeck are favorable to labor unions, yet neither carries a union card and are not pronounced union men.

Therefore they feel that they are practically not represented on the ticket of the Thirteenth representative district. Just what the outcome will be, cannot now be predicted, but one thing is certain, the support of labor unions which the Democratic party has figured upon will be greatly divided in the coming campaign, unless some deal satisfactory to the union is fixed up before election.

Senatorial Convention.

The Democratic senatorial convention reassembled today at 1 o'clock, but transacted no business and adjourned until next Wednesday, when it will reconvene in this city.

The senatorial convention of the Peoples party met today in the city hall and as the Democratic senatorial convention had adjourned until next week members of the convention concluded that it was useless to wait longer on the action of the Democratic party in the matter of fusion. They therefore nominated Owen Prentiss as candidate for senator.

D. M. McNamara, who was put into jail yesterday on being unable to furnish a police bond of $2,500, today was released on a writ of habeas corpus, issued by Judge Stimson on condition that he furnish a bond of $500 for his appearance at the next term of court, when he will be tried on the charge of assault with intent to do bodily injury.

John Randolph was given a hearing on the charge of malicious mischief for breaking into the shaft house of the Hull City placer, on which he had a lease. The testimony of the complaining witness proved to the court that Randolph had a claim of right having a lease on the property and his tools were also locked up in the shaft house.

Rose Davis, who was arrested a few days ago, was released today, giving a bond of $500 for her appearance next Wednesday morning for trial on the charge of grand larceny. Mrs. M. Young alleges that the Davis woman stole $200 worth of valuable dresses from her at the Parisian block.

Harold E. Sherman, agent for the Mars Con. M. Co. today caused the arrest of W. P. Allen, whom he charged with perjury. He alleges that Allen testified falsely in a suit brought by the company last fall against Allen.

The draw for the Eagle's morning stake, which takes place at Sportsman Park tomorrow, is as follows: Kenyon's Peacemaker against Scott Bros. Rainbow; Sharbaro Bros.' Fluorine vs. Masconi Bros.' Freelander; Kenyon's Cuba vs. Donahue's Spondthrift; Miller Bros.' Bill vs. Kenyon's Corbett; Scott's Proudface vs. Dr. Moore's Dallas; Dr. Moore's Master Monis vs. Masconi Bros.' Searchlight; Sharbaro Bros.' Denver Blue vs. Crennis' Claribel. The purse hung up in the races is $100.

Two marriage licenses were issued today as follows: Henry Smith, aged 26, of Victor, and Mary Goodnight, age 19, of Florence; Joe Studebaker, age 23, and Edna M. Stephens, age 25, both of Victor.

SHOES

for Men and Boys have arrived

The fall and winter seasons in Colorado are particularly hard on shoes, and good, durable and E-Z shoes are more in demand from early fall to early spring than at any other season. We've prepared for the demands of the weather and for the needs of all classes of wearers. Black shoes will be the most popular, and especially in enamel with heavy soles and Scotch edges.

Heavy Tans will remain in popular favor, being so well suited to our dry, sandy soil.

Our shoes fit your feet, your mind and your purse.

WORK FOR COLLEGE STUDENTS.

The increased attendance at college makes the demand for work much larger than ever. Boys want to care for furnaces, lawns, horses, cows, rugs, floors, or tutor, or do typewriting, or, in general, any work, which a young man can do to support himself while attending college. Please remember how much it means to a student who is without money and, if you have any work that he can do, notify E. G. Lancaster, 929 North Nevada.

NORTH END W. C. T. U

A few months ago the state president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Antoinette Hawley of Denver, came to Colorado Springs and organized a union in the north part of the city, known as the North End W. C. T. U.

The temperance question is the most soul-stirring subject that has ever agitated the nations of the civilized world, and we believe that the W. C. T. U. is today the mightiest force for temperance that the world has ever known, its motive power, women's love for Christ, linked to undying mother love, aflame by the touch of the Holy Spirit. It is one thing to take a conventional interest in temperance and quite another to consider in the presence of the stern logic of facts, one's own duty in the work.

The work that opens up for us to do is to create a better temperance sentiment, to ring new chimes and combinations upon the silver bells of truth, pathos and argument. The bells are part of God's full orchestra with which he has all along been making the harmony of the ages, and the music of the spheres.

There is great work to be done so we will continue to ring our silver bells and we extend an invitation to the women of the North End to join our Union.

After a short summer vacation, the work for the coming year commenced last Saturday with a business meeting at Mrs. Crowley's. Election of officers takes place in September before our annual state convention. The following officers we elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Crowley, 20 E. Columbia; secretary, Mrs. Harbaugh, 200 Weber; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clay H. White, 1311 N. Tejon; treasurer, Mrs. A. S. Blake, 422 East Dale; vice president at large, Mrs. Connell, 221 E. Dale.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. A. S. Blake on the ... of September at 3 o'clock. An invitation is extended to all who are interested in temperance.

The badge of the W. C. T. U. is a bow of white ribbon and the pledge is: "I hereby promise, with God's help, to abstain from intoxicating liquors, as a beverage, including wine, beer and cider, and will earnestly endeavor by all honorable means to promote the cause of temperance."

The dues are $1.00 per year. Remember that this day your influence may save a soul if you are true to the white ribbon in temptation.

FOOT BALL AT THE STATE UNIVERSITY

Outlook for the Season Is Very Favorable.

COACH MORTIMER ARRIVES

Made a Few Remarks to a Meeting of the Student Body in Which He Urged Generous Support for the Athletics of the School—Other News of the University Town.

Special to the Gazette.

Boulder, Colo., Sept. 14.—The football season has opened very auspiciously this year by the arrival of a new coach and the early inauguration of a training table and systematic practice.

Local enthusiasts of the gridiron are more than pleased with the general appearance of the material for this year's team, and a great many are positive in their belief that it will be one of the strongest elevens that the state has ever seen. A strong point in favor of this expectation is the fact that new material will not have to be depended on to so great an extent as heretofore. The new team will no doubt contain the following last year's men: Turman, left guard; Patterson, right half; Wolcott, center; Geo. Carlson, right tackle; John Carlson, right end, Garwood, right guard, Thayer, left half; together with Fowler, O'Connor, McCandless, Painter and Nilson, who acted as substitutes. On the other hand the team has lost some of its best material. Following are those who have left the ranks: McMurray, quarterback; Robinson, left tackle; Rogers, left end; Merten, full back, and Rudd, substitute full back.

Gamble field has been put in good condition and practice has been held daily. A large number of new men are out trying for positions and among them not a few of the graduates from the various high schools in the state.

W. L. Turman, the "husky" big left guard of last year, is captain of the present team. When called to the platform at a student's meeting last Wednesday, he expressed his opinion that the quality of this year's material and the ability of the new coach were sufficient reasons for the success of the team. F. W. Mortimer of Chicago, the new coach, was then introduced and received a hearty applause. His remarks were brief dealing chiefly with the importance of the support of the students in helping the team to be a success.

In a business way matters have assumed definite shape. H. P. Gamble, the captain of the victorious team of '96, will act as graduate manager and Lou Clark has been elected undergraduate manager, while Charles A. Lowe is the newly elected president of the Athletic association.

U. of C. Notes.

The total enrollment this year will reach the 900 mark; 500 in the university proper and 400 at the State Preparatory school.

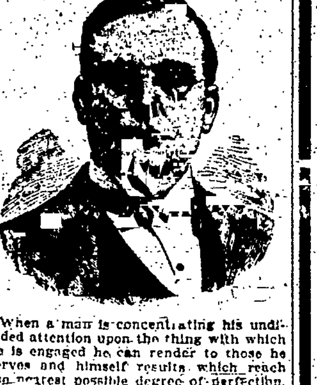

Judge S. F. Prouty of the United States district court at Des Moines, Iowa, addressed the students last Thursday.

Vesper services will be conducted every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock this year under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

The Women's League has organised for the year and are making preparations for a naval reception.

A MUSHROOM GROWTH

Is Not Satisfactory, but When a Person Steadily Though Slowly but Surely Gains Success, It Is Lastingly Pleasing—Over Ten Years Ago Dr. Ellison Began the Special Study and Treatment of Consumption, Asthma, Catarrh, Hay Fever, and Chronic Diseases of Men, Women and Children, and by Conscientious Service He Has Overcome Difficulties and Forged His Way to the Front as a Successful Specialist Until Today He Enjoys a Practice Second to No One in the State. Consultation and Examination Free to All at His Office Every Day Except Sunday.

When a man is concentrating his undivided attention upon the thing with which he is engaged he can render to those he serves and himself results which reach the nearest possible degree of perfection. Every man with ambition likes to succeed and should desire and diligently seek to excel. Dr. Ellison's conception of success and the best way to achieve it is that it is better to devote one's entire time and energies to learning a few things well than to scatter the same amount of work over a more extensive field of effort. He has been learning how to cure chronic diseases for the past ten years. In fact he is learning every day in a better and more effective way how to treat consumption, asthma, catarrh, hay fever and chronic diseases of men, women and children. Every day presents new thoughts and ideas of the most successful methods by which these diseases can be treated. The doctor is just as diligent in the study of his specialty as he was ten years ago, and all who suffer from seated diseases can employ him with a reasonable expectation that they will secure desired results. People who decide to treat with him for the diseases he treats as a specialty have reached an intelligent conclusion and they can investigate his treatment and have their case examined free of cost. If you can not come to his office, write. The treatment can be taken at your home. Office: 24 North Tejon street (over Craigue's grocery store). Office hours: Mornings from 9 to 12; afternoons from 2 to 5; evenings from 7 to 8 o'clock.

SPECIAL NOTICE | Dr. Ellison gives free consultation and examination every day except Sundays, from 11 to 12 a. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m.

The Growing Popularity of Gas House Coke

WE CAN FILL ORDERS NOW IN ROTATION AS RECEIVED.

Is due almost as much to its extreme cleanliness and the convenience of handling as to the fact that it is so much cheaper than other kinds of fuel. It's a pretty hard matter to run a soft coal furnace without getting some smoke in the heat pipes. This difficulty is all avoided in coke, and besides it gives twice as much heat, lasts twice as long and costs very little more. It has the added advantage of sustaining heat for a long while without the constant replenishing necessary with soft coal. Giving as great a heat and being much lighter than hard coal, it costs about half.

People are buying coke now

A good many of them, to give it a thorough test before laying in the winter's supply of fuel. Almost anybody is willing to reduce their coal bill. You are. If coke will do it, you'll use coke. Isn't it worth your while to try a ton now and keep check on the result?

It makes as good a fuel for cooking as for heating purposes, and for baking, ironing, etc., the even sustained heat it gives is particularly desirable. Give us an order for a trial ton.

Go Home, Consumptives!

It's no longer necessary for you to live permanently in this climate. In fact, for many of you, the climate can work no permanent benefit. Its healing effects are neutralized in time, and no further improvement results. By taking advantage of the opportunities nature and science offers, you may become so much better in a short time that permanent residence in the East is possible with absolute safety and no fear of returning disease.

The proof that this can be done for you is the large number of people for whom it has been done. Nature and science provide a remedy for all diseases. Science, in its advance, becomes every day more potent to heal. What has been done for others in days past, can more easily be done for you today.

Consumption Has Been Cured. So, Naturally, Consumption CAN BE CURED.

Some doctors excel in surgery, some in fever cases, some in children's cases, and so nearly every physician today has his specialty.

For over twenty years Dr. Shepard has specialized consumption.

He has treated and cured hundreds of cases. He is treating dozens of cases every day. Nearly every day sees his cured or improving patients on their way back east for permanent residence.

Those few cases which have reached the last stages of the disease are incurable, but Dr. Shepard frankly tells you if this is the case with you, and, in order that there may be no mistake or misunderstanding, he makes an

Savings Bank System In the Public Schools

Systems of school savings have been in vogue in certain European countries for more than sixty years. France and Belgium were the first to introduce it into their schools. From that beginning it has been extended into all, or nearly all, of the civilized countries of the globe. It is in fact a legitimate outcome of progressive civilization.

In the United States.

The system was first tried in New York in 1835. It has met with steady encouragement from the highest educational authorities, has been successfully practised in many of the states, and has undoubtedly come to stay. It has been warmly indorsed by the New York State Superintendent of Public Instruction, the National Bureau of Education at Washington, the State Banking Department, the U. S. Commissioner of Education, the U. S. Treasurer, the President of Brown University and scores of other prominent men, including a majority of the editors of the leading religious and secular newspapers of the country.

Thrift and Economy.

The system is based on the idea that every child in the land should be taught the practical lessons of thrift and economy. Its introduction into the schools entails no extra expense, nor does it interfere with any of the ordinary school work; on the contrary, it has a most healthful influence and is, in fact, a blessing in disguise. After a fair trial it has come to be considered an educational feature of our time. It is believed that the public school is the place of all others to teach legitimate ways of saving, and to inculcate habits that will tend to make good citizens of our boys and girls. In other words the saving habit is justly regarded as a positive virtue, ranking high among the moralities of school and adult life. The business of school saving is beneficent in character, financial in its methods, and should be universal in its application. We owe to our children that kind of education which will best endow them with means to successfully cope with the future, and to remedy some of the imperfections existing in our civil and social administration.

Need of the System.

The zest and eagerness with which a few educators at first welcomed and entered upon the work of introducing the School Savings System into their classes, and the increasing number of schools practicing the system has been a surprise to the friends of the movement, but is the strongest possible proof of the need and adaptation of the system.

The trustees of public schools have usually felt that the savings idea was practical and philanthrophic and deserving of every encouragement. And when fairly introduced it seems to have awakened in the minds of the parents also, and people of modest means a sense of thrift and economy which otherwise would have been unknown. Many profitable enterprises owe their origin to the system; even more than that many mindful citizens have learned from the children the road and advantages of Savings Banks.

The introduction of the system in the schools is optional and not obligatory. Contribution by the children is also left to their own free will.

"Easy Come, Easy Go."

During the last fifty years in America the population and resources of the country have increased wonderfully, and money has become more plentiful than in any other country. But easy come, easy go! is a true saying, and in every square mile of our territory where civilization has made its mark there are legions of devices to tempt the industrious to spend their hard earned money. Therefore every good influence tending to counteract these evils should be encouraged to the uttermost.

It has been said by competent authority that no individual and no nation can be prosperous except they are thrifty, and they cannot be thrifty unless they have been educated to be so. Why should not the clergy and ministers of all denominations, who preach on a variety of subjects, bring before their congregations the religious duty of frugality? For frugality is an ally of the spiritual and physical welfare of all the members of the human family.

Statistics.

From careful compiled statistics it appears that the School Savings System was started in one of the schools of Long Island City, New York, by Mr. J. H. Thiry in 1885, and January 1st, 1900 was in operation in 97 cities of 15 states; and out of a register of 179,630 pupils in these schools, 52,694 had saved $806,015.97 of which $525,209.77 had been withdrawn, leaving a balance of $280,806.20 due the child depositors on the first of the present year.

The System in Denver.

Viewing with alarm the growing extravagance of the people and the pressing need that practical training in thrift should become a part of the education of children in the grade schools, the following petition, signed by upwards of 3,000 women was submitted to each of the school boards of Denver at their July meeting:—

To the Board of Education of District No 1.

We, the undersigned organizations, beg leave to submit the following facts about school savings banks, and to urge the adoption of the system in the school under your control.

The plan includes an individual pass book for each child, with entries made by the teacher in the books and on a statement sheet for the bank a weekly collection and examination by the bank, a monthly credit to the child of the month's deposits, and a balance struck once in six months, when the interest is added.

The results of this system are important. It furnishes a valuable training in business methods, fosters thrift and increases the influence of the teacher over the child. It educates in self-reliance, self-denial and persistency of purpose.

Three thousand six hundred and forty-eight dollars was spent in thirty-eight weeks in district No. 2 for cheap candies and similar commodities last year. Not a word is needed to add to the eloquence of these figures.

School savings banks have been successfully operated in many cities in various states, having the heartiest commendation from business men and educators, with United States Commissioner Harris at the head.

In the interest of children and of the community, whose character will be determined by these future citizens, in the name of civic patriotism, we ask a favorable action upon this petition.

Signed by the members of the Civic Federation, Colorado Equal Suffrage Association, Social Science Department Woman's club of Denver, North Side Woman's club, Clio club, West Side Woman's club, South Side Woman's club, New Century club, Hesperian club, Educational Department of Woman's club.

The educational department of the Woman's club was already committed to the endorsement of the Penny Provident fund, practically, the same in its workings.

At one of its latest meetings the Civic Federation committee on School Savings banks reported that the system had been adopted by many of the school boards of the city. The plan is in operation in the Bryant school in North Denver, and it has been made optional with the other principals to establish the system.

The plan was so well received that the Civic Federation is talking about the possibility of furthering the establishment of the system in all the schools of the state.

In Colorado Springs.

It may be news to some that a system of school savings called the "Nickel Stamp Savings System", has been in operation in Colorado Springs for several years. It was introduced in 1896 by the Savings and Loan association of here it was formally authorized by the school board, and has since been in use in all the public schools save one. Under this system the Savings association furnishes the principals of the several schools with neatly engraved gummed stamps (something like a postage stamp) of the denomination of five cents. Upon a certain day or days in each week these are offered for sale in the schools. Stamp books are also provided in which the children paste the stamps as fast as they are purchased. When any child has accumulated twenty of the stamps, filling one page in his book, he may go to the office of the association, have the stamps redeemed, and start in his own name a deposit account. He receives a pass book, in which his deposits and withdrawals are entered, and is treated in all respects like a bank depositor, except that his deposits are not subject to check. His funds may be withdrawn (upon notice to the association, if required) upon the request of his parent or guardian.

This system is remarkably simple and effective. It calls for no bookkeeping in the schools, very little extra work or attention on the part of the teacher or principal, (and is easily comprehended by the pupil. In fact the youngsters take much pride in being able to do some business on their own account; and if diligent in these comparatively small matters they will, in later years, be reasonably sure of carrying accounts with the banks.

Testimonials.

A few notes of commendation of the Nickel Stamp System have been received from some of the school authorities. They are as follows:

From John Dietrich, superintendent of city schools.

"The system of Nickel Savings has been in our schools for a number of years, and from my observation of the successful working of the system, it has tended to encourage our boys and girls to save their nickels and dimes rather than to spend them for useless articles such as candy, gum, etc. The system has been adopted in nearly all our ward buildings, and our boys and girls have several hundred dollars on deposit and drawing interest, all of which has been accomplished through the Nickel Savings System. It has the endorsement of the Board of Education, and, I believe, nearly all the principals and teachers of our schools."

From Miss Maggie Morgan, principal of the Roswell school.

"You may quote me as heartily in favor of the Nickel Savings System. It cultivates a thriftiness not obtainable in any other way."

From J. W. Scott, principal of the Garfield school.

"The Nickel Savings System of the Savings and Loan association is in successful operation in the Garfield school, and it is gratifying to note that the habit of economy and thrift is growing among the pupils. I believe the plan worthy the earnest approval and cooperation of parents and teachers."

Some of the Results.

The Savings and Loan association here has not been specially persistent in pushing this branch of its business—possibly, because it adds much detail to its office work without proportionate gain. Nevertheless, it has, in the comparatively short time in which the system has been in operation, had about 280 child depositors, carrying in the aggregate 360 shares of the par value of $100.00 each. Upon these shares there has been paid, or deposited, in round numbers $1520.00. Of this amount $560 has been withdrawn, leaving a balance of $960.00.

Interest Earnings.

In this connection it should be stated that all sums left on deposit three months or more receive four per cent. annual interest. This system is also freely made use of by newsboys and others who by thrift and industry accumulate small savings.

Typical Savings Accounts.

Alfred Johns, newsboy, has had a deposit account running with the Savings and Loan association, from May 20, 1899 to Sept. 11 1900. During this period he has made 41 deposits, amounting in the aggregate to $116.40, or an average of something over $2.00 for each deposit. The smallest deposit was 80 cents and the largest $5.80. His withdrawals have been $29.00, leaving a balance to his credit of $87.40.

Charley Johns, a junior member of the newsboy firm, has carried a Savings account for a few months only. His 14 deposits from June 4 to Sept. 11, 1900, amount to $17.40, all of which is clean savings—no withdrawals.

It will be seen at a glance that these young news-dealers are both thrifty and diligent. It is a refreshing sight to see them enter the Savings and Loan office loaded fore and aft with papers which they are too busy to unship. The little chaps mount the step which brings them level with the desk, and make out their deposit slips in good shape, using the latest modern style of vertical penmanship. They are of the "get there" kind, and, should their lives be spared, will be likely, in due season, to have a Savings association or bank of their own.

Thrift Should be Encouraged.

All children should be taught the value of pennies and dimes. Every effort should be made to bring before them the importance of thrift, to the great advantages of care in little matters which they might otherwise fail to observe. They should have instilled into them the habit of regular weekly saving. The amount each week is almost unimportant provided the habit of regularity in putting by is recognized and acted upon. The practical lesson of thrift and economy is, indeed, the only sound and satisfactory way by which without alms or relief from others, most of us can provide for the every day misfortunes of life, such as sickness, want of employment, etc.

If lessons of thrift and economy could be introduced in all of our public and Sunday schools, it would be difficult to estimate the benefit to be derived to the community at large, in the reduction of crime, the evils of intemperance, and in the alleviation of suffering in general.

THE LODGES

The lodges have had a lively week. The Elks have been in the swim and also entertained the members of the Arnold Opera company. The Odd Fellows have sent $33 to the Galveston sufferers during the week. The Knights Templar go to Denver this week to attend a grand celebration of their order. Initiations have been features of nearly all the meetings of the week. Following are brief reports from some of the orders:

ELKS

At the business meeting on Tuesday night the Elks initiated two candidates.

One of the features of the week for Elkdom was the plunge party given to the local lodge by Exalted Ruler Moreland. Nearly all the members were present and listened to the magnificent oration by Bro. W. G. Holland of Zanesville, Ohio. Brother Holland will probably deliver the address before the lodge next week.

A movement is on foot to organize an Elk's Glee club of 20 voices.

The lodge held a very enjoyable social session on Friday night, entertaining the members of the Arnold Opera company which was billed to present the Bohemian Girl at the Opera house, but which could not appear there because of the failure of their stage effects to arrive with them. At the Elks' club the various members of the company entertained and were entertained. Brother Raffael, the baritone of the company, sang "The Heart Bowed Down" and the tenor sang "Then You'll Remember Me." The bass rendered "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" and the pianist played several numbers, making a programme of rare excellence, though informal. Local Elks assisted in the entertaining and a very enjoyable evening was the result.

Important business is to be transacted at the business meeting on Tuesday night.

MASONS

Pike's Peak Commandery No. 6, Knights Templar is preparing to take in the big Quarter Centenary celebration of the Grand Commandery of Colorado which occurs in Denver on Friday of this week. Owing to the fact that most of the members will be in Denver on Thursday night, no session of the commandery will be held this week.

I. O. O. F.

Pike's Peak lodge held a very interesting session on Thursday night. One candidate was initiated. There were visiting Odd Fellows from all parts of the country.

The lodge voted to send $25 to the Galveston lodge for the aid of the sufferers. The visiting Odd Fellows added $8 to this and on Friday J. E. Shobe, the scribe, sent the money to Galveston.

Next Thursday night Pike's Peak lodge will hold a social. A programme will be rendered and refreshments including ice cream, cake and coffee will be served. All visiting Odd Fellows and any members of their families who may be in the city will be welcomed.

JR. O. U. A. M.

Duquesne Council No. 17, Junior Order United American Mechanics, met in regular session last Wednesday night. There was a very fair attendance. One candidate was initiated and two applications were received.

The lodge membership of the council is now in good shape, there being no sick members. Brother George Owens who was sick has returned to his duties and Brother J. C. St. John, who was sick, is also around again.

K. OF P.

The Knights of Pythias have secured the old national guard armory in the DeGraff block and will continue to hold their meetings there.

Only regular routine work was done at the meeting of Myrtle lodge last Wednesday night. There was a large number of visitors present and a number of speeches were made.

W. A. Davis, the local delegate of the D. O. K. K. to the supreme lodge, has returned.

The new lodge is progressing nicely. Mr. Alex Helbscheid is one of the most active promoters of the new lodge and is passing around a list to secure charter members.

S. OF V.

Despite the storm on Tuesday night, the regular meeting was attended by a quorum but nothing of importance was done.

Past Commander Wheeler, of the Connecticut division of Sons of Veterans, is visiting the city.

GALVESTON RELIEF

With a donation of $1,000 from Mr. W. S. Stratton and several smaller sums from different people in the city, the Galveston relief fund has started well toward the $8,000 mark. Treasurer Hale sent off another draft yesterday morning, the sum being $1,500 this time, and by Monday it is likely that another draft for a like amount will be dispatched to the stricken city.

The feature of the work of raising the money yesterday was the magnificent gift of Mr. Stratton. Mr. Stratton has been out of the city for several days but yesterday Mr. Ramsay handed to the mayor a check for $1,000 for the relief of the suffering Texans.

Other sums came in throughout the day. Mrs. J. A. Hayes sent in her personal check for $100. Mrs. Capell secured the amount of $37 which she turned in yesterday, making her total collections $160. The Deaf and Blind Institute desired to participate in the work and the amount of $30 was sent in by them. The afflicted children in the school requested to be permitted to contribute and most of the money came in from them. Mr. J. F. Humphrey was another who made a personal subscription worthy of note yesterday, he sending in a check for $20.

The work of collecting and sending off clothing was also kept up with vigor yesterday, the chamber of commerce being the scene of operations. Secretary McClurg reported that he had sent off three boxes and a trunk and will send off another box on Monday. Mr. McClurg reported also that the sum of $70 had been turned in to him during the day, Mr. De La Vergne sending in his personal check for $35.

Friday's contributions contained a check for $100 from R. J. Preston.

The work will be kept up today, the churches being the center of activity in the cause. An opportunity will be given any who desire to contribute to do so at all the churches this morning and evening and the Christian Endeavor societies are expected to take up subscriptions at their meetings.

A very touching letter was received yesterday by Mrs. Charles S. Sprague, in which was a one dollar bill. The latter, which speaks for itself, was as follows:

Mrs. Charles S. Sprague.

Dear Madam: This dollar bill came from Houston, Texas, as a birthday present to my little boy from his aunt, and we wish you to send it to the relief fund. I have a niece who is a pupil in the Ursuline convent. With God's grace she was saved.

We are strangers in your city from Houston. Very respectfully,

Mrs. Charles Weiss,

Two Excursions for the New Road Today

A large number of citizens have already been up the new railroad to Cripple Creek to the end of the completed line, and nearly all intend to as soon as they can get around to it. It seems that there is an intoxication about it, and once a man starts he wants to go all the time. Many citizens have been up a half dozen times or more, so enchanted do they become with the trip. It only takes two hours and only costs fifty cents. The camera fiends are a regular army in numbers. It seems to an on-looker that about half of those who go have the little boxes strapped to them, and when the cars stop at Point Sublime, there is a regular chorus of snapping. The cars were filled every afternoon the past week.

There are to be two excursion trains today. The morning trip is quite pleasant and one is better assured of a good seat then. In the afternoon there will be four or five cars provided so that there will no doubt be room for all. The morning train leaves the D. & R. G. depot at 10:30 and the afternoon train leaves at 3 o'clock. It is a very pleasant way to put in an hour or two. The state of the weather does not make much difference either, for it may be raining down here and very bright up in the mountains. It rained hard Tuesday and some of the ladies on the trip declared that they enjoyed the wonderful cloud effects more than they would have the bright sunshine alone. It is a magnificent sight to be up on the mountains and see the sun break through the clouds and light up all the plains.

Newsboys Frolic at The Manitou Plunge

The people who happened to be in the vicinity of the corner of Pike's Peak avenue and Tejon street last evening at about 7:45 probably thought that the newsboys of the city were having a game of football but they weren't. No, they were just getting ready to leave for "Bill" Moreland's bath house at Manitou and they were anticipating the good time which was coming. They were Mr. Moreland's guests last evening and they will doubtless remember the event as long as they live.

Mr. Moreland closed his bath house with two of the most enjoyable complimentary parties ever given. Last Thursday evening the members of the local lodge of Elks were entertained in a most delightful manner and last evening the newsboys of this city and Manitou were invited to spend a few hours at the plunge.

Last evening about fifty of the boys boarded a special car at the corner of Tejon street and Pike's Peak avenue and started for Manitou. The car was furnished by Manager A. L. Lawton and the boys showed their appreciation of his hospitality by cheering loudly at every mention of his name. The boys kept up the excitement on their trip to Manitou. They cheered for "Bill" Moreland, A. L. Lawton and President McKinley and their voices rang through the night air to an echo.

They arrived at the bath house about 8 o'clock and were met there by Mr. Moreland. They did not need to be directed to the plunge for they had been there before. They made a rush for swimming suits and were soon in the plunge to spend a couple of hours. They enjoyed their swim as only boys can, diving, running about the platform and jumping into the water from the highest places in the room. Mr. Moreland remained in the room and took special pains to see that all had a good time. One little fellow had a bad cold and was not able to go into the plunge. Mr. Moreland gave him a hot soda bath which he seemed to enjoy as much as the other boys did the plunge.

After the boys had spent about two hours in the plunge they were treated to plenty of Manitou ginger champagne and pop corn. After giving many cheers for Mr. Moreland and bidding him good night they returned to this city.

Among the boys who went were the following: Kassner, Cort, Edwards, Elstun, Hesser, Koehler, Lee, Dixon, Spicer, Caldwell, Morrison, C. Jones, Paulson, Warren, Kellogg, Jolly, Moberly, Steinbaugh, Howe, Pratt, Gowdy, Davis, Edwards, Ross, Scofield, Buckley, Warren, Wallace, Pickens, Hawkins, A. Jones, Rord, Riddenbaugh, Goshen, Johns, Sherod, Perkins, Taylor, Pracht, Wiley, Chapman, Minier, Henderson, Burnett, Jones, Boyer, Newell, House, Enders, Enser, Russell, Warren, Barrett, Davis and Bancroft.

REVIEW OF THE SCHOOL WEEK

In speaking of the reopening of the city schools and the progress being made Superintendent Dietrich said yesterday:

"The schools are making an excellent start. I have received most encouraging reports from the principals of the various buildings and I am greatly pleased with the work which is now being done. With the exception of the crowded condition of some of the buildings I have encountered no serious difficulties. The new classes have been organized at the Lowell building and extra teachers have been employed. This has greatly relieved some of the rooms at that building and a few at the Liller school. It is quite probable that extra classes will be organized at either the Lincoln or the Liller school, and this will be a great help in overcoming the present difficulties. The total enrollment at present shows an increase of about 400 over that of the same time last year and it is expected that a large number will enter within the next few weeks."

All parents interested can see the directors any morning from 9 to 12 o'clock. Visitors are welcome.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

The old saying that "a man, who is naked can't give away his shirt," is only another way of saying that you can't give what you haven't got. The man can't give "free medical advice," or any other kind of medical advice who hasn't got a medical education and a certificate to the fact, in the form of a diploma. And in this particular a woman has no more privilege than a man. She can't give medical advice without medical education and medical knowledge.

The offer of free medical advice made by Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been imitated by so many, who without any medical qualifications claim to give "medical advice" that a word of caution is necessary.

Don't write for medical advice to any one, man or woman, who is not a physician. If they are physicians they will take the title of physicians or doctors so that you may recognize them. If they don't claim that title it is because they dare not, for fear of the law.

Do not forget that there is just as much difference in doctors as in artists. Every little town has its artist who draws and paints. But these "artists" generally paint copies of the works of great artists like Millet. There was only one Millet.

There is only one Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, such as Dr. Pierce presides over. Thousands of women come or write to Dr. Pierce who have found no help at the hands of doctors of less skill and narrower experience.

Any sick or ailing woman, suffering from the distressing forms of disease peculiar to women, is invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. Such consultations are absolutely private. Each letter is treated as a sacred confidence, and the answer is sent in a plain envelope, bearing no printing upon it. There is no offensive questions and no charge may be avoided. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THREE CONVICTIONS IN DISTRICT COURT

Two convictions was the record of the district court yesterday.

After being out for a day and a half, the jury in the case of the People vs. G. H. Croot returned a verdict of "guilty" last evening. Croot was charged with keeping open a tippling house on Sunday. The place in question is known as Albrecht's saloon in Manitou and is near the Rapid Transit depot there. Croot was fined $100 and costs by Judge Harris immediately after the verdict was rendered.

The case of the People vs. J. W. Bohrlage occupied the attention of the district court all day yesterday. On account of the nature of the proceedings the case was conducted behind closed doors. It was turned over to the jury at about 4:30 yesterday evening and late last night a verdict of "guilty" was brought in.

In the county court the case of Nicholas vs. Fitzhugh occupied most of the day. It was given to the jury late in the afternoon and a verdict of $207.50 was brought in in favor of the plaintiff. It was a suit brought to recover attorney's fees.

PLANS FOR THE STREET MASKING

Mr. Grant Pauley will have charge of the grand masquerade ball and street masking which are to be held on Friday evening, September 28, under the auspices of the Colorado Springs Horse Show association and is making arrangements to have several special features during the evening. He stated yesterday that he had already arranged to have a cake walk in connection with the ball which he hopes to make one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever held in the city.

The cake walk will be open to all and will be held at the Temple theater just before the grand masquerade ball takes place. Mr. Pauley states that $25 in cash prizes has already been offered for the walk. A large cake will also be donated for the occasion by Mr. Thomas Gough. A special prize of $10 will be offered for the best costume shown during the evening.

Another feature of the ball will be some exhibitions of buck and wing dancing by Mr. George Kleinbeck, one of the most popular members of the Alta Vista Mandolin club. He has gained a remarkable reputation during his stay in this city and an announcement that he will appear during the evening will be gladly received by all who know him.

ROUSING REPUBLICAN ADDRESS BY HON. F. C. GOUDY OF DENVER

The first real political meeting of the campaign, the first meeting preceded by a political street parade, was that held at the Temple theater last night. The big building was well filled, the entire lower part being filled solid and there being many in the galleries. The addresses of the evening were by the Hon. George C. Richmond, formerly presiding judge of the court of appeals, and the Hon. F. C. Goudy, formerly of Colorado Springs and now of Denver, who is regarded as one of the Republican probabilities for the gubernatorial nomination, which will probably be given to some one tomorrow.

The Street Parade

The G. A. R. drum corps led the parade of the El Paso County Republican Flambeau club. The flambeau boys were attired in full uniform and with flambeaux and Roman candles they gave a pleasing exhibition which was witnessed by every one in the down town district last evening, undoubtedly 6,000 people. Nothing but praise was heard concerning the work of the club, and it will be numbered among the attractive institutions of Colorado Springs from the present time forward.

The club has a handsome red, white and blue flag on which the name of the organization appears, the banner being the gift of Mrs. Lidredge and other faithful Republican women.

At the Theater

The parade disbanded at the Temple theater and hundreds of people followed it into the building. After a rendition of The Stars and Stripes Forever by the Alta Vista orchestra, President Brooks announced that a telegram had been received from Mr. E. C. Brady stating that he was confined to his bed and could not be present. With the assurance that the Republican party has no lack of speakers, however, Mr. Brooks introduced as the first speaker of the evening Hon. George C. Richmond, formerly presiding judge of the court of appeals.

Judge Richmond said: "I think that it is cruel both to you and to me that I should be called upon to take the place of so brave a man and soldier as Mr. Brady. It was not my good fortune to be engaged in the late unpleasant war, but I was engaged in the war that was waged in this country from 1861 to 1865 and was on the side of the Union. There were then in the northern part of the country as many Democrats who were against the Republican administration as there are today. And had the American people not been loyal to their country and their flag we should today have a disrupted republic. During that controversy our great leader, the president of the United States, had the same charges made against him by the Democracy—charges of infidelity and of disloyalty to the Constitution that are now made against the Hon. William McKinley.

"The campaign of that day was much like the one of the present. Events in the day of Lincoln were similar to events of today.

"I must say that it is gratifying to me to find so fine an audience of Republicans in Colorado Springs tonight. Four years ago it could not have been found. Four years ago in Teller county it was dangerous for a man to proclaim himself a Republican, but today we have a Republican club of more than [illegible] members and we are going to give a good account of ourselves when the time comes. If we cannot carry the county by a good majority we can at least prevent the Democrats from carrying it by a disgraceful one.

[illegible] the position of the speaker of a good many campaigns ago. When eagles are in the air it is time for bats and owls to hie themselves home."

MR. GOUDY'S ADDRESS

Mr. Brooks then introduced as a former resident of Colorado Springs the Hon. F. C. Goudy of Denver, whose name is now a household word in homes in every section of the state.

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I never come to Colorado Springs that I do not feel homesick and regret that I ever moved away. In this year 1,300 the people of Colorado Springs are coming back as I witness here to the old Republican camp to the party whose magnificent achievements are the noblest ever recorded in human history. This is a year of American devotion and American glory. It is the closing year of the grandest century the world has ever known and the brightest pages of the history of the century have been those written by the Republican party.

"A false issue is being raised by the Democrats and by this I mean the Populists, the Silver Republicans and the Democrats, for the bones of the two affiliated parties are bleaching on the beach of oblivion. This issue that they have raised is very similar to Democracy's issue in 1864 and 1868. I notice in the audience a number of Grand Army badges, the noblest and best badge that was ever placed on the breast of man, and it recalls to my mind how in the days of my youth at the old home in Ohio I heard a speech by Vallandigham, the chief of copperheads, in which he used the word imperialist, empire and other words that we are hearing today. Some of you will recall and other have read how in that campaign Vallandigham and his followers charged Abraham Lincoln and the splendid army in blue with infidelity to the country and inability to maintain the government. They referred to General Grant as the man on horseback who wanted to set up an empire backed by the army in blue that marched down Pennsylvania avenue in the grandest parade the world has ever seen. The charge of imperialism comes to us tonight from Boston and from the press of the Democracy, but I want to stand here and brand the charge as false today as it was in '64 and '68. Imperialism—William McKinley, that magnificent soldier, that splendid patriot, that Christian president, an imperialist? When imperialism was first charged against the Republican party, when Democracy's palace car platform candidate was in his swaddling clothes, William McKinley was at the front doing his duty to his country.

"Do you believe that a man like Roosevelt [illegible] in his [illegible] aspiration and risk his life on such a field as that at Santiago has designs upon the life of the republic? The purpose of the Democrats is the same today as it has always been, to fool the people [illegible] voters. It is hard to realize how at this time any American should desire a change from the good times which are now being experienced. If the object of the present administration is to build up an empire, I want to ask some Populist or Silver Republican or Democrat why William McKinley recalls the troops from Cuba, why General Joe Wheeler of Alabama, General Fitzhugh Lee of Virginia and thousands of other patriotic Democrats are going to vote for McKinley and why a Republican congress organized an army of 65,000 American volunteers whose enlistment expires July 1, 1901. Won't we need them any longer than that if we are to maintain an empire? Pay no attention to these charges coming from Bryan and Altgeld and Tillman and Pettigrew, who would probably be in his cabinet if he could be elected. McKinley, the major, the president, the patriot, would give the Filipinos American liberty under the American flag. Bryan would give them a protectorate which would require more soldiers than [illegible] protectorate were to be maintained against all land grabbing Europe. Why doesn't this government demand the partition of China and a portion of the territory? I think a plank was left out of the Democratic platforms which were made in Kansas City when the Democrats discovered that there is a declaration of independence. I think that a plank should have been inserted reading as follows: We view with alarm the military tendency of the Republican party and denounce Emperor McKinley for protecting Americans in the Chinese capital. When I hear of a Republican who is going to vote against McKinley because of imperialism I know that he is either a disappointed Republican or one looking for an excuse to vote against his party.

On the Consent of the Governed.

"Speaking of the consent of the governed—why should the Filipinos and the Tagals be asked for their consent when it should be asked what sort of a government they want and why should 80,000 American freemen be disenfranchised in North Carolina? I'll tell you why and I don't wish to attribute any bad motives to Mr. Bryan, for God knows that he will be beaten badly enough, but Mr. Bryan expects to secure the electoral vote of North Carolina and it wouldn't do. The Filipino interests him but 80,000 Americans lifted to citizenship by our army in blue are not worthy of his consideration.

"A word about trusts. At the convention in Denver a few days ago occasionally, about once in 24 hours, the word silver was heard and all the rest of the time was put in by politicians quarrelling over fusion like coyotes over a bone. That convention, after the police corruption which marked the primaries, had the audacity to call in a minister who opened the convention with these words: 'May sin and corruption be as far as from this convention as Thou art, O Lord.' The Democrats denounced trusts, but I wish to ask what trust legislation the Democrats enacted between '93 and '96 with W. J. Bryan in congress. Bryan would amend the constitution in order that trusts might be controlled, but when late in the session of the last congress the Republicans submitted a measure along the line of Mr. Bryan's suggestion, not because he suggested it, however, the Democrats to a man voted against it. Some trusts should be curbed, but the Democratic party is a party of promise only and the only party of performance is the Grand Old Republican party. Some Democrats contend that the tariff encourages trusts. In England, where absolute free trade exists, four trusts larger than any in this country are found.

On the Silver Question

"The Democrats have crucified silver on the cross of imperialism to satisfy Eastern Democrats. Eastern Democrats urge a vote for Bryan on the grounds that there will be a Republican congress and that silver legislation or other harm cannot be brought about. Personally I am for bimetallism today, but I am for the honor of my country first, and laying aside all questions of imperialism, militarism, trusts, silver and all the others, the great important question in this campaign is that which appeals to the conscience, the patriotism and the sense of justice in all Americans—shall the splendid and patriotic administration of William McKinley be continued for four years more? We have lower interest and [illegible] own summary of the administration: more money and fewer mortgages. We have changed from a bond issuing to a bond paying nation, from a borrowing to a lending nation, from one whose workmen were idle to one where they are employed, a nation where public faith is upheld with prosperity at home and prestige abroad. Ask yourself in [illegible] conscience whether you would have President McKinley haul down the flag where it has been raised. If so vote for Bryan; if not, keep at the helm of the government brave President McKinley and with him brave [illegible] and gallant Theodore Roosevelt."

After the close of the address by Mr. Goudy, Mr. Brooks announced that next Saturday night the meeting would be addressed by the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and that one week from next Wednesday the people of Colorado Springs will have an opportunity of hearing the next vice president of the United States.

RECEPTION FOR NEW STUDENTS

The annual reunion of the old students of Colorado college and the reception to the new students took place in Coburn library last night and was a distinct social success. The reception as has long been the custom at the college was given under the auspices of the two Christian associations of the college and was managed and carried out successfully by the members of the associations.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the students began to arrive. They were met at the door by members of the Christian associations and were presented by them to President and Mrs. Slocum, Miss Loomis, President Wells of the College Y. M. C. A., and Miss Bradshaw, president of the College Y. W. C. A., who formed the reception committee. After a cordial greeting from this committee the students were taken to [illegible] where cards were made out bearing their names, which were afterwards pinned upon their coats and dresses for the purpose of identification.

At about 8:30 the crowd began to come in in large numbers and soon the big library room was filled. It was a scene of beauty. No attempt had been made to adorn the library and no artificial adornment was necessary for the merry groups of young ladies in their pretty gowns and the jolly faces of the young men made a picture in life that was good to look upon. It took but a short time for the old and new students to become acquainted with each other and the lively buzz of conversation broken by merry laughter soon filled the room.

About the middle of the evening the refreshments were served and an innovation was introduced in this feature this year. The refreshments were served on the west side of the library on the lawn, the young people sitting on the coping or in the window sills of the library. Ices and cakes of various kinds were served by Mrs. Cajor, Mrs. Strieby, Mrs. Smith, Miss Wiggin, Mrs. Cooper and Miss Worder and were handed around by the young [illegible]. At about 11 o'clock the reception broke up and the young people went home with hearts beating with the glow of college spirit.

CHARGED WITH MISUSE OF EMPLOYER'S FUNDS

J. W. Christian was arrested yesterday morning on a warrant from Justice Ruby's court charging him with larceny as bailee. He has been employed for some time as [illegible] company, a well known book concern of Boston, and he is accused of having appropriated money which he collected from [illegible] however, and is now in the county jail awaiting a hearing.

Some time ago Christian sold a new set of the books which he was handling to a well known business firm in the city but he was not authorized to collect for them as that was a matter to be settled between the firm and the book concern.

A few days ago Mr. Henry Fleetwood, a traveling representative of the book concern, arrived in the city for the purpose of collecting for the books which had been sold by Christian. He called upon the business firm to which Christian had sold a set of books and stated that he desired to collect for them. He was informed that the books had been paid for when they were delivered and a receipt was presented. It was stated that Christian had sold the books for $91.0 and had discounted 10 per cent for cash payment.

Fleetwood met Christian on the street a short time afterward and asked for an explanation, but the latter made no reasonable answer. Fleetwood then went to Justice Ruby and had a warrant sworn out for Christian's arrest. After being arrested Christian appeared in court and pleaded not guilty to the charge preferred against him and his case was set for hearing next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

ANACONDA

Special to the Gazette.

Anaconda, Sept. 15.—Three families got into the justice court this week by a little unpleasantness on Thursday. L. J. Camp and wife are tenants of Mrs. Josie Sutton in a furnished house. Mrs. Camp some days ago was put into the county jail on charge of passing a worthless check. Thursday, while Mr. Camp was in Cripple Creek trying to get a bondsman for his wife, he [illegible] personal belongings of himself and wife from the house which they had been occupying and rented the house to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Straw. When he returned he threw the Straws out of the front door and again took possession. Straw swore out a warrant for his arrest charging him with disturbance. When the officer went to serve the papers on him Camp met the officer at the front door with a six shooter. The officer attacked him from the rear [illegible] back window, entered and captured his man.

Camp was given a trial before Justice Collin but was discharged. Camp then swore out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Sutton, charging her with grand larceny, claiming that the personal effects that she took are worth $1,000. Mrs. Sutton took change of venue to Justice McCullah's court and the case will be heard next Wednesday.

The three year old son of Marshal Tom Flanagan was run down by a careless driver yesterday. The child was knocked down [illegible] the wheels passing over its neck. The vehicle, however, was a light one and the child is not dangerously injured.

A Bryan and Stevenson club was organized last night with a membership of 10.

A few days ago the [illegible] the town safe was broken and pieces of it were found on the floor. Some of the papers belonging to the town were taken from the safe. It was alleged by the opposition to the city administration that the members of the council and mayor are responsible for breaking open the safe. [illegible] still in the safe and that the town treasurer refuses to cash any warrants [illegible] is not on them. The old town clerk who has never recognized his successor as being duly qualified has never turned over the combination to the safe to the new administration; therefore it is thought by his partisans that as the administration has never had the combination they employed some one to break it.

The St. Louis Mining and Milling company, composed principally of local Aspen capitalists, has a group of eight promising claims at the head of Taylor river. Their property is close to the producing mines operated by Chas. Olsen and partners. These claims cover the same vein [illegible] contact [illegible] feet deeper. The company has a fine tunnel [illegible] and now have a large tunnel in about 70 feet. They expect to cut the contact at about 300 feet. The company is working four men at [illegible] expect to be shipping ore next season, and with the wagon road now being built by Gunnison county to their locality they will have a down hill pull nearly all the way to Aspen. Joe Hunn, Roy Parr, Jno. Cole, M. C. McNichols, Harold Clark and perhaps some others are Aspen members of the company. HOW HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

WRITTEN FOR THE GAZETTE BY HON. JAMES B. BELFORD

ONE of the most historically interesting debates that occurred in the Senate of the United States took place in the month of February, 1847. It lasted throughout the entire month and was participated in by Benton, Cass, Webster, Calhoun, Badger, Morehead and others. The Mexican war was in progress and President Polk had transmitted to Congress a confidential message wherein he asked that an appropriation of three millions of dollars be made to enable the president to acquire territory from Mexico, and to pay money in advance of the ratification of the treaty of peace. By some it was more than intimated that part of this sum was to be used as a solatium to the consciences of Mexican officials; by others that the purse of Santa Ana was to be restocked, while still others looked upon it as a corruption fund to be used in places and at times where and when it would do the most good.

General Cass, then Senator from Michigan, and leader of the administration forces, was repeatedly challenged to disclose the real intent and purpose of this appropriation, and after maintaining silence for many days, at last made an elaborate speech in which he defended the policy of the administration.

The President, in his regular message sent to Congress in the preceding December, had stated that, as a condition of peace, Mexico must cede some territory to the United States; and in various parts of the country, Democratic meetings were held in which it was demanded that this government should not content itself with anything less than the complete absorption of all of old Mexico. In Congress, however, the territory expected to be surrendered by the Republic of Mexico was California and New Mexico.

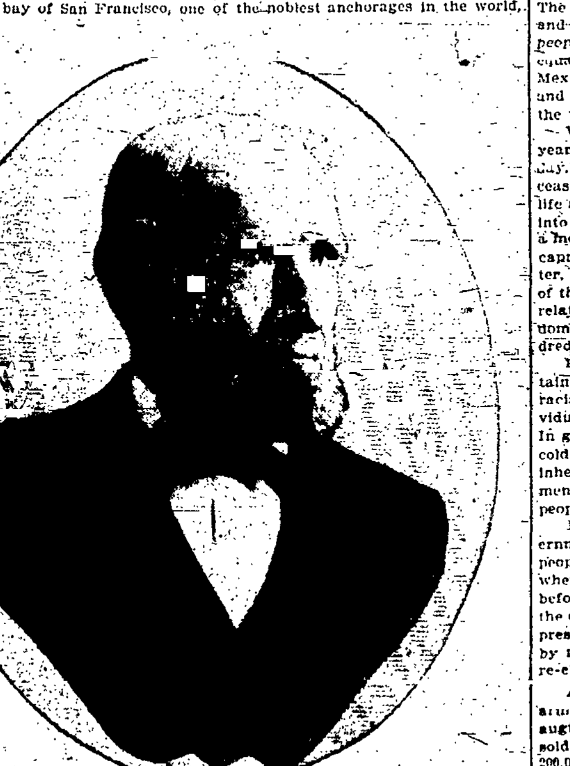

The Constitutional power of the United States to acquire territory seemed to be conceded by all sides. The expediency of acquiring it, and the disposition to be made of it when acquired, were matters around which the fires of debate fiercely burned. The Whigs stood arrayed on one side, and the Democrats on the other. To add to the excitement, Mr. Wilmot had offered in the House his famous proviso, declaring that, in the territory to be acquired, slavery should be prohibited.

But let us see what was said by the disputants. Early in the debate, Senator Morehead of Kentucky made an elaborate speech, in which he used the following language:

"Suppose you make a treaty on this basis (acquiring New Mexico and California) and it is confirmed by the Senate, what do you gain? You have acquired additional territory; what do you purpose to do with it? I suppose there is not a citizen of this country who, if the question were to be put to him, would not say that you have territory enough already. But you acquire additional territory. What else do you acquire? You will have acquired a large number of the population of Mexico, an ignorant, a fanatic, a disorderly people—a population having none of the elements of character in common with the people of this country; a population sprung from a different origin, having none of the blood of the Anglo-Saxons running in their veins a people differing from you in origin, in character, in feelings and in principles having nothing in common with you. What are you to do with them? Are you to treat them as you do your slaves? Are you to treat them as serfs belonging to the land you acquire, as attached to the soil? Or will you put them on a level with the people of this country? Will you give them the privileges which your people enjoy, and enable them to regulate and control the destinies of this country? Will you elevate them to the character of citizens of the United States, though it is now universally believed that the people of Mexico are entirely destitute of the capacity of self-government? I will acknowledge the energy and power of this government, but, at the same time, remember their remoteness from the center of action, remember the responsibility that you would incur owing to their distance from the seat of power. You may pass your laws, but you may not be able to enforce them."

It will be observed from the above that the arguments now being urged against the growth of the nation were put forth more than fifty years ago, by men as wise and as patriotic, and apparently as distrustful as are some of the prophets of today. Mr. Webster was more emphatic in his hostility to the acquisition of California and New Mexico, and, speaking at a later period, but before the war closed, said: "What sympathy can there be between the people of New Mexico and California and the inhabitants of the valley of the Mississippi and the eastern states in the choice of President? Do they know the same man? Do they concur in any general Constitutional principles? Not at all. Arbitrary governments may have territory and distant possessions, because arbitrary governments may rule them by different systems and different laws. We can do no such thing. They must be of us, part of us, or strangers. I think I can see that in progress that will disform and disfigure the Constitution. While these territories remain territories, they will be a trouble and annoyance; they will draw after them vast expense; they will probably require as many troops as we have maintained during the past 20 years to defend them against Indian tribes. We must maintain an army at that immense distance. When they become states, they will be still more likely to give us trouble."

To these arguments Gen. Cass replied as follows: "A strong desire pervades this country that a region extending west of our present possessions to the Pacific coast should be acquired and become a part of our confederacy. The attempt to purchase it was made during the administration of General Jackson, and the hope of succeeding has never since been wholly abandoned. I will not detain the senate by spreading out the reasons which make such a measure desirable. It would give us a larger territory, a great deal of it calculated for American settlement and cultivation, and it would connect us with the great western ocean, giving us a front along its shores, in connection with Oregon, of, perhaps, 13 or 14 degrees of latitude. It would give us also the magnificent bay of San Francisco, one of the noblest anchorages in the world, capable of holding all the navies of the earth, and, from its commanding position, controlling in some measure the trade of the northern Pacific. But, besides these advantages, commercial and geographical, there are important political considerations which point to extension as one of the great measures of safety for our institutions. In Europe, one of the social evils is concentration. Men are brought too much and kept too much in contact. There is not room for expansion. Minds of the highest power are pressed down by adverse circumstances without the power of free exertion. Hence, the struggles that are ever going on in our crowded communities. And, hence, the revolutions that disturb and alarm the old world, and which, one day or other, will shake them to their center. Questions of existence are involved in them as well as questions of freedom. I trust we are far removed from all this, but, to remove us further yet, we want almost unlimited power of expansion. That is our safety valve."

Such was the doctrine of the Democratic party, as announced in the senate by the man whom that party a year later nominated for the presidency. It is a singular fact also, and one worthy of especial note, that nine years after this sensational debate, the Republican party at Philadelphia named as its first presidential candidate a man from this same California that Webster declared could have no interest in common with the people of the Mississippi valley or the eastern states. The prophets of 1847 were clearly not annointed.

What man or woman in all this republic would return New Mexico or California to Old Mexico or to any other power? When the Mexican war closed, the republic was composed of twenty-nine states, and the acquisitions made more than doubled its extent, and doubled its wealth immeasurably. It did more. It revolutionized the commerce of the seas and the traffic of the civilized earth. The dower of gold that California alone brought gave a new birth to humanity and marked a new era in the advancement of the human race. Her acquisition peopled this western country and gave the nation a thoroughfare of travel unequaled in the world. The custom duties in five years exceeded the cost of the Mexican war. Nevada, Utah, part of Colorado, a portion of Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico with their tremendous capacities for future development attest the wisdom of this Democratic doctrine of Polk and Cass.

What intellect can measure or grasp the greatness of these vast regions fifty years hence? And yet, the republic is as firm in the affections of the people today, aye, even more so, than it was fifty years ago. Republican institutions have ceased to be a mere promise—they have become an experience, a part of the very life and being of the people. He who asserts that this country is to be converted into an empire as the result of an election, overlooks the fact that society is not a mere artificial mechanism that can be fashioned and moulded at the whim or caprice of any man or party of men; it is, as has been well said by a great writer, a growth, and represents a tissue of ideas, sentiments, customs and modes of thought that have come down from the past. When our fathers severed their relations with England, they cherished and perpetuated all the great and freedom-inspiring doctrines that have won their way to recognition through a hundred struggles. What we are today is what all the past has made us.

People should bear steadily in mind that institutions are the results of certain inherited mental organizations that cannot be changed at pleasure. The racial ideal of the Anglo-Saxon is a representative democracy where the individual is the initiative force in every system of politics, labor, science and art. In government, as in religion, the instincts of the people are more forcible than cold reason; sentiment more powerful than logic. The instincts, sentiments and inherited beliefs of our people are all in favor of a republican form of government, and it would require miraculous transformations in the character of our people, either to inaugurate or to maintain a monarchical form of government.

If neither Washington nor Hamilton, both of whom favored a stronger government than was created by our Constitution, could impose their ideas on the people more than a hundred years ago, is anyone mad enough to hope that now, when the Constitution and the nation are stronger in popular affection than ever before, he can accomplish what they failed to achieve? Hamilton submitted to the convention a form of Constitution that provided a life tenure to the offices of president and senator the tendencies of today are to make the senators elective by the people, and to limit the presidential term to six years without right to re-election.

At the close of the civil war there were more than a million men under arms, and devoted to one great general. Here was the opportunity for the inauguration of an emperor, and yet that army melted away to less than 25,000 soldiers. When the Spanish war was waged, we raised an army of more than 200,000, and yet how soon they were mustered out of service. Who thought of an imperial government then? But why give importance to a shallow pretence that is put forward in the hope of vitalizing the withering fortunes of a decadent party?

He has read history to little, if any, purpose who has not learned that it is in eras of expansion that the fervor of genuine Democracy has most conspicuously asserted itself. It is at such times that the arts and arms and commerce of a people shone forth most resplendently. Look at the cities that dotted the Mediterranean in ancient times and acted as the supports and feeders of civilization. Look at the achievements made by the arts and sciences when Greece was planting her colonies and Rome was spreading her sway over innumerable barbarous and savage tribes that reached from the Thames to the Euphrates. Look at England, if you please, during the eighteenth century, and what unprejudiced mind will withold the confession that to the fervid spirit of her disciplined Democracy the modern world owes its rapid advancement and its civilization.

It is stagnation and exclusiveness, not growth and activity, that give birth to despotisms. It is a stinted vision that constrains some people to limit the universe to the country in which they are born and live. Modern inventions and discoveries have annihilated distance and brought remote countries face to face. The discovery of a chemical reaction in one country has changed a manufacturing system in another, and the cultivation of wheat in India has forced the abandonment of agriculture in large regions in England. A vibration or fluctuation of the price of metal in the orient is felt in the mines of Colorado. The owner of a coal mine here is asking the extent of the coal deposits of China and Japan. No nation can longer live unto itself or be independent of another. The future battles of the world are going to be industrial battles; interests, rather than sentiments, will be the guide of all national policies.

The United States is encompassed by two great world oceans, the Atlantic and Pacific, and the struggles for trade will be fierce and inexorable. Why should not the commerce of the Pacific be made as large and profitable as the commerce of the Atlantic, and why should not the descendants of those who opened the highway of the nation from the eastern to the western sea have an opportunity to participate in the resources and share in the wealth of those lands whose immobile civilization awaits the touch of a western resurrection? Years ago, Mr. Seward declared that "the Pacific ocean, its shores and islands and the vast region beyond will become the chief theater of events in the world's great hereafter."

To the north of us, Canada through her railroads and steamship lines is reaching out for her share of the oriental trade. Shall we do less? In a dispatch sent by Mr. Blaine, then secretary of state, in 1881, to Minister Conely at Honolulu, after discussing our relations to the islands of the Pacific, assures him that "the policy of this country with regard to the Pacific is the natural complement to its Atlantic policy," and that as Cuba, although owned by Spain, was a part of our commercial system, so were the Hawaiian Islands a part of our commercial system, to be equally guarded and watched over by this republic. In other words, he declared in effect that whatever entered into our commercial system in either ocean became an "American question."

With respect to the Philippines, there are certain matters of consideration to which recent events have given a novel and added interest. For some years past, Russia has been engaged in the construction of her great Trans-Siberian railway. Speaking on this subject, one of the foremost thinkers and writers of France says that when the Trans-Siberian railway is finished, all the commerce between the east and west will tend to concentrate itself in the hands of Russia. This railway will cross part of China and unite Russia with Japan. The 130 millions of Russia will then be in contact with the 400 millions of China, and Russia will become the first commercial power of the world, since the transit between the east and the west will necessarily be in her hands. From London to Hong Kong is about thirty-six days by sea. By the Trans-Siberian railway, it will be eighteen. The sea route will then be as completely abandoned as the cape route is today, and what then will be the use of England's commercial fleets? France will lose what little trade remains to her. This same writer says: "A circumstance which no one could have foreseen: the conquest of the Philippines by the United States, is the only thing that may retard or prevent the absorption of the East by Russia, an absorption that would be ruinous to the West, and which would mark the end of the progress of liberal ideas in Europe. The conquest of the Philippines, so near as they are to China, brings the United States into the midst of the Chinese question which Spain was too insignificant to affect."

"The influence of the United States and England will re-establish the equilibrium of affairs which has been tending more and more in one direction. We are certainly on the eve of a gigantic struggle for the partition of the East which will undoubtedly fill the coming century. It should be borne in mind that Russia has already secured ports and concessions in Manchuria, a Chinese province which contains one hundred and twenty millions of inhabitants, which makes her mistress of that province, and gives her an enormous field wherefrom she can recruit her armies."

Our Democratic friends of today may jeer at the providence of history, but, if ever a nation was led step by step up to an imposing participation in the solution of the world's destiny, it is the nation of which we are citizens. Events which we could not have foreseen have placed us in a position where we can demand the preservation of the territorial integrity of China. This [illegible] we can occupy a point of vantage where we can overlook and protect our increasing trade interests, and, in rescuing Western Europe from the threatened domination of Russian aggression, perpetuate indefinitely the [illegible] fortunes of mankind. Why should we be so isolated when the world of [illegible] industry and economic relations points to the existence of a single world, [illegible] in the rights of each will ultimately be respected by all, and the rights of all become the common heritage and treasure of each?

HON. FRANK C. GOUDY.

Written for The Gazette. By John Belt.

IF THE Republican state convention nominates a lawyer for the position of governor of the state of Colorado, Frank C. Goudy will receive the nomination.

If the Republican convention accepts the only announced candidate for the nomination, Frank C. Goudy will be the nominee.

If the Republican convention believes it to be good policy to choose a man who is particularly strong in the western and southern parts of the state, and who is probably the best campaigner suggested for nomination on either ticket, a man who will start to run for governor from the announcement of the ballot in the convention and who will keep on running until the last ballot is cast on the afternoon of election day, Frank C. Goudy is the man.

Under ordinary circumstances there would be no doubt about it. The convention would meet, the secretary would be instructed to cast the unanimous ballot of the convention for Frank Goudy of Arapahoe, and that would settle that part of the ticket.

But ordinary circumstances do not prevail this year. The main obstacle te Goudy's nomination is not to be found in the Republican party, but in the ranks of the Democracy.

The obstacle is named Charles S. Thomas.

Thomas is a lawyer.

So is Goudy.

Goudy would be a good governor, probably.

Thomas is one of the poorest governors Colorado ever had, and the average voter on the approach to a candidate drawn from the ranks of the law is now as skittish as a Missouri mule on the edge of a slough.

No better proof of this condition is needed than the action of the Democratic state convention, which nominated a business man for the position, and nominated him because he was a business man.

When the Devil becomes a saint it is generally accepted as proof positive that he is in failing health, or that saints are in demand in that particular community.

It is unfortunate that Goudy should be judged by the Thomas standard and thoroughly unreasonable. But reason, declares the cynic, was given to man to mislead his judgment, while woman gets there by intuition.

If therefore Goudy is nominated by the Republicans it will be because the convention believes that it is worth while to convince the people that there is a difference in lawyers, and because his personal character and qualifications for the office are sufficient to outweigh the handicap of being "a lawyer like Thomas."

And the first step in this direction is an honest admission of this condition. For if the people of the state understand that the convention has carefully considered this and faced it boldly it will make an impression upon them. Let it be known that Goudy was presented to the convention in the full blaze of publicity as "a lawyer like Thomas," and that there was no attempt at concealment or subterfuge, and that the personal quality and eminence of the man was such that the convention resolved to give him the nomination in spite of it all, and it ought to be worth at least 10,000 votes to him throughout the state.

No better or more striking proof of his availability could be given.

Fortunately for himself and for the convention Frank Goudy is one of those men who is well known. His record is an open one, and the argument which his supporters will present to the convention will not be compounded of fiction and concealment.

His age is a matter of uncertainty.

(This is not an attempt to cajole the woman vote.)

He was born in 1852.

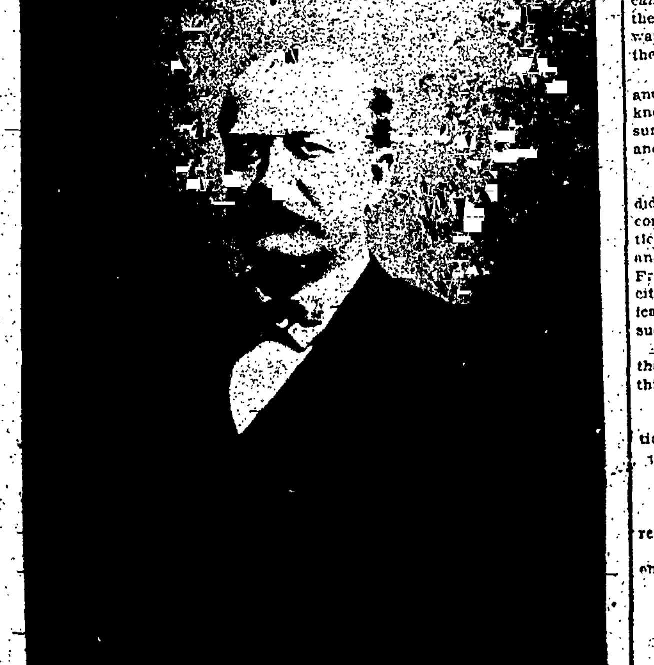

He began to live in January, 1879, when he came to Colorado.

Previous to that time he stayed in Ashland county, Ohio.

He is therefore somewhere between 21 and 48 years of age, and like many others in Colorado, is growing younger every year.

Like all other men whose biographies are worth recording, he was born and brought up on a farm. In Goudy's case this is true.

He had a common school education, attended Baldwin university for three years, taught a district school for a number of terms in Ashland county, began the practice of law in April 1878, and was married in Marion, O., in November, 1879. He also learned to be a Republican.

[illegible] GOUDY.

These things constitute what is called a good start in life.

The desirable immigrant to a new country is the man with a good character, a good education, a good trade or profession, a good wife, and good political principles.

Frank Goudy may be classed as a good immigrant.

This year he celebrated his twenty-first birthday, in Colorado, and reviewed his record in the state.

First of all, four sons, the oldest 19 years of age.

Then a record of public service and preferment by his fellow citizens. He was appointed district attorney of the Seventh judicial district in March, 1881, and served three years. He was a Blaine and Logan delegate in 1884, and he was county attorney of Arapahoe county during the years 1895-1896. In May, 1896, he was chosen as a delegate at large to the Republican national convention at St. Louis by the convention which passed the following resolution: "That the delegates selected by this convention are hereby instructed to act in harmony with the views of the Hon. Henry M. Teller as to the course to be pursued by the Colorado delegation to the national convention."

He obeyed his instructions.

There were 26,000 voters in the state who did not follow Teller at that time, but that is 75,000 or so shy of the number required to elect a Republican governor this year.

To some prodigals is given the happy privileges of bringing the calves with them on their return.

If Frank C. Goudy wanted to pose as a "business man," he would have good working material. In 1888 he was appointed receiver for five of the largest canal companies in the state and served in that capacity for 18 months. All the companies under his management were reorganized and not a single man was discharged or his wages lowered. Three hundred men were constantly on the pay roll.

He still has charge of the irrigation canals owned by the Travelers' Insurance company in the San Luis valley and near Fort Morgan in this state, and is known as a careful and successful manager. He receives and pays out large sums of money, he directs large enterprises, he employs a great many men, and he does all this satisfactorily and successfully.

But he is not a business man.

If Governor Goudy should manage the affairs of the state as well as he did those ditch companies, the people of the state would have no ground for complaint. But in spite of the fact that a successful lawyer in general practice is apt to acquire a very good knowledge of business methods and details and in spite of his career as a receiver and manager for the ditch companies Frank Goudy does not pretend to be a business man. He is a lawyer, a good citizen and a man of public affairs, such a man in short as the people of American states customarily choose to preside over their affairs as governors, and such a man as Colorado would be likely to choose nine times out of every ten.

In one particular his record is weak, as compared with the gentleman whom the Democrats have selected as their candidate. It would be easy to conceal this point, but candor is the very soul of this article.

Honesty is the best policy.

If the reader has heard this sentiment before, will he please supply quotation marks?

And candor compels us to admit the truth, damaging as it may be to Goudy.

No volunteer fire company has been named after him.

And now you know the worst.

If Goudy is nominated, the Democrats may, and probably will rake his record with a fine tooth comb, but they will find nothing worse than that.

As a candidate, Frank Goudy's strong points would be his fearlessness, his energy and his enthusiasm.

He has three points in his political faith—yes, there are four of them.

Goudy believes in:

The United States;

Colorado;

The Republican party;

Himself.

He doesn't believe in No. 4 in quite the same way that he does in the others, but self-confidence is not a bad quality in a candidate.

As for the others, he believes in them all over and all through, and if he is turned loose as the apostle of Republicanism to the Coloradoans he will win a lot of converts. And converts are particularly desirable at the present time.

Goudy believes that Colorado is going to go Republican this year. That is one reason why he is a candidate for the nomination. If he is nominated he expects to be elected, and he is a man whose opinion is entitled to respect.

The Democratic position seems to be: "A Democratic lawyer was such a rank failure as governor that we must try a Democratic business man."

Possibly the Republicans will say: "The Democratic governor was so much of a failure that it will be well to try a Republican."

And then Goudy will be nominated.

HON. [illegible]

Republican Candidate for State Senator from Arapahoe County.

Republican Confidence.

One may be a little surprised at the confidence displayed by intelligent men everywhere regarding the probable success of the Republicans this fall. It is to be regretted that this confidence tends to apathy, but intelligent people cannot conceive how business men, laboring men, farmers, mechanics, and in fact all citizens who are enjoying such a full measure of prosperity can vote to overturn that prosperity. And while this is inconceivable, it cannot be impressed too often upon the minds of those very persons who are enjoying the prosperity which is the fruit of Republican rule that they must see to it in the [illegible] that their votes are cast and counted in order to continue the [illegible]

Its Beginning, History, Object and Methods.

BY ELLA CELESTE ADAMS.

IT IS not a charity but an interchange of kindly greetings and the passing on of "Good Cheer."

> Have you had a kindness shown?
> Pass it on
> 'Twas not given for you alone
> Pass it on
> Let it travel down the years
> Let it wipe another's tears
> Till in Heaven the deed appears
> Pass it on

From what incidental episodes do great and lasting results ensue!

Less than five years ago Mrs Cynthia Westover Alden president general of the International Sunshine society author and journalist—who has won [illegible] during her splendid literary career, was exchanging Christmas greetings and tokens with her co workers upon a great metropolitan daily. For [illegible] it had been understood that no gift should exceed ten cents in value [illegible] Christmas cards were chosen each with an eye to their daintiness and appropriateness of sentiment in flower and verse.

Mrs Alden [illegible] that with but one exception her cards all bore the giver's [illegible] and [illegible] that while enjoying the gifts she would have liked them better if not written upon as she wanted to pass them on. All exclaimed "What, you wouldn't give our present away, would you?" Mrs Alden answered "Why not? What do you do with yours?" Then notes were merrily compared. "I'm afraid I shan't my card to the first baby I see," said one. Others said they tacked them [illegible] will stuck them around the edges of their mirrors or used them for book marks till faded and soiled and finally [illegible].

Then Mrs Alden told them a very sweet story of the travels of a ten cent card [illegible] the Christmas before. It bore the words of that beautiful hymn "Bless [illegible]" and with it came a thought of a dear old uncle—Uncle Dan Westover who lives at Evans Colorado now president of the Evans branch of the Sunshine society. The card was sent to him. Uncle Dan [illegible] it on to a friend of his who after making a copy of the poem for himself forwarded it [illegible] until before the [illegible] that thrill of delight that always comes when especially remembered.

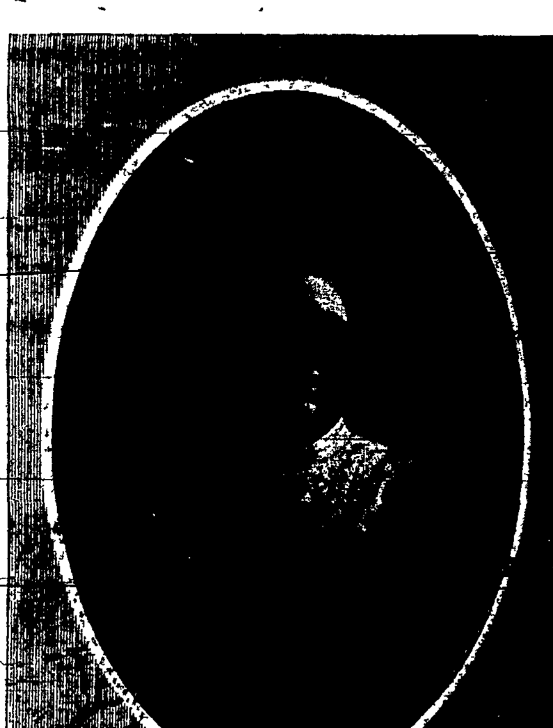

The little [illegible] of the infinite possibilities of the last gift passed on in the true spirit of the giver and receiver led this group of bright women to [illegible] interchange [illegible] what might be possible [illegible] a rich cluster of royal purple pansies. [illegible] might have been sent on to her if it hadn't been marked [illegible]. Then the cunning group of [illegible] that would have been just the thing [illegible] little invalid child she [illegible] amusing. So they found each one [illegible] the name of the giver. Inspired with this new idea of increasing the pleasure [illegible] Mrs Alden a fresh lot of cards and she immediately sent them out. The thanks received were so pretty that further [illegible] ensued and a small club was formed for the exchange [illegible].

The name of "Sunshine" was first chosen for the column in the newspaper in which the greetings were printed but the membership grew [illegible] till a club, Lodge and [illegible] was [illegible] and the time of "Shut In" given to the [illegible] thought of sunshine so January [illegible] the name became "The Sunshine Society." [illegible] incorporation of the International Sunshine Society in New York city March [illegible] under the provisions of the membership [illegible] laws of the United States.

The object is to incite its members to the performance of kind and helpful deeds and thus bring the sunshine of happiness into the greatest possible number of hearts and homes.

It has been well said that this organization has a most desirable contract on its hands. It undertakes to show people how to be happy especially is particular attention paid to persons unable to enjoy the freedom of out door life. They are brought into touch with those similarly situated and thus enjoy the benefit of fellowship and [illegible]. To keep in mind the fact that happiness is goodness—to accept the ultimatum that all things work together for good, to grasp every present opportunity, however trivial, to do a kind deed and to pass it on to trust implicitly in the Supreme Goodness always particularly in seasons of sorrow and gloom. Thus may the bitterness and sting of worry which so persistently dogs the footsteps of a majority of the world be driven away and every one [illegible] the center of a miniature solar system giving out and getting light, cheer and comfort.

The requirements for membership are of the simplest. Any worthy person who is desirous of brightening other lives by some thought, word or deed, may become a member by carrying sunshine into other hearts and homes. The only membership fee—a suggestion of helpfulness—the only dues—acts of kindness.

MRS CYNTHIA WESTOVER ALDEN
President General of the International Sunshine Society. A Denver woman graduate of the State University at Boulder

In answer to the inquiry how to "pass on" one's gifts. Write to the president general and she will find out who does need the gifts if she does not know already by writing to the different state presidents. They through their various daily or weekly newspapers are regularly sending out Sunshine news of the state and local branches. Beginning with the September number of The Ladies' Home Journal a page of that popular magazine is being devoted [illegible] exclusively to the Sunshine society work. It is edited by Mrs Alden and [illegible] the official organ of the society.

The growth of the society has been phenomenal. Starting from a thought it has grown until its members now number many thousands.

Emerson realized the power of thought when he wrote:

Make yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts. None of us as yet know for [illegible] what fairy palaces we may build of beautiful thought—proof against all adversity.

From the parent society branches have sprung up until every state in the union is represented with regularly enrolled presidents. When a state has ten [illegible] consisting of at least ten members it becomes entitled to a state president. In Colorado there are at least a thousand members and Mrs F A Wixon of Denver, is president of the Colorado division of the International Sunshine society. Uncle Dan Westover of Evans Colorado is president of the branch there. Mrs M H Givens of Idora Colorado is president of a flourishing branch in that mining town. Besides the various states and territories of the United States there are also branches in India Australia France Canada the Bahamas and Mexico.

The club motto "Good Cheer" was furnished by Mrs W H Chase of Lefferts Place, Brooklyn. After a three months competition during which thousands of verses and paragraphs had been submitted to a committee. The creed is embodied in the words written by the Rev Henry Burton M A in 1868. George C Stebbins set them to music and they can be found in Gospel Choir No 2.

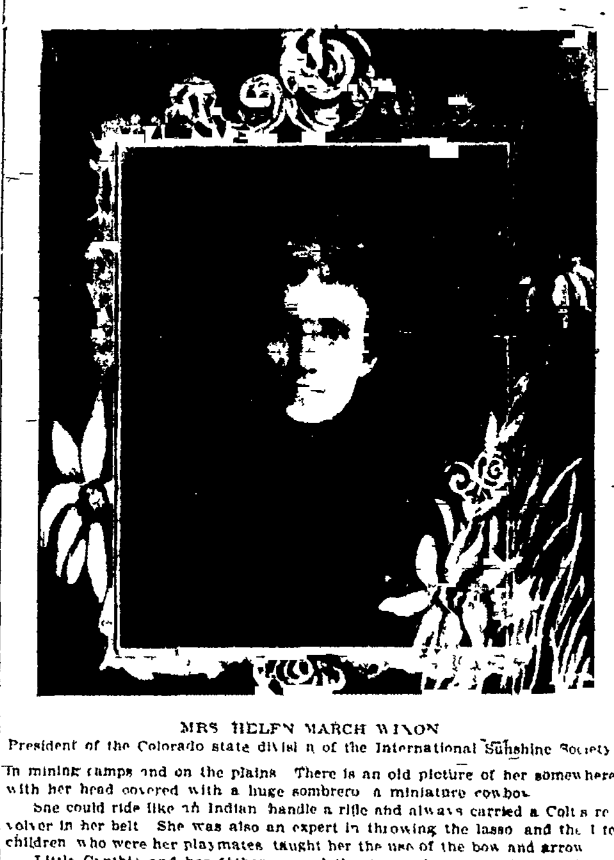

The floral emblem, the Coreopsis was also chosen by a committee to whom suggestions by the thousands were submitted. The winning flower Coreopsis was selected by Mrs Richard Norton of Hightstown N J. Its beautiful yellow seems a fitting emblem of sunshine and it is so hardy a perennial that once planted it [illegible] care of itself and is therefore like the sun inextinguishable.

The club colors yellow and white were the selection of Mrs E L Scofield state president of the Connecticut division. Yellow is typical of the golden sunshine and white is emblematic of the purity of purpose that characterizes the sunshine work.

The song decided upon by the majority vote of the members is "Scatter Sunshine," to be found among the Christian Endeavor Hymns. The words were written by Lanta W Smith and the music by E O Excell.

The Founder a Coloradoan

Colorado should take a particular pride and interest in the Sunshine society for the founder, Mrs Cynthia Westover Alden is a state product and her life has been one full of deeds of heroism. Her family were of the real old stock of Virginians. Her father was a geologist and mine owner. When she was but [illegible] years old he took her across the Rockies upon a trip. MRS HELEN MARCH WIXON in mining camps and on the plains. There is an old picture of her somewhere with her head covered with a huge sombrero a miniature cowboy.
President of the Colorado state division of the International Sunshine Society

She could ride like an Indian, handle a rifle and always carried a Colt's revolver in her belt. She was also an expert in throwing the lasso and the [illegible] children who were her playmates taught her the use of the bow and arrow.

Little Cynthia and her father crossed the mountains seven times with the trains [illegible] a route infested with bands of savages who captured children and all who ventured beyond the safe circle of their protectors. Among the unfortunate ones was her favorite driver of the party. He had been scalped and lay suffering agonies out in the broiling sun. No one had courage to venture to his relief but Cynthia with the simplicity and daring of childhood crawled through the tall grasses and bathed and bound up his wounds and thus saved his life.

Once when an infuriated Indian was about to tomahawk a boy who had strayed from his train Cynthia shot the Indian and rescued the boy. Another of her adventures was that of preserving the life of a miner when an angry mob were about to lynch him. She flung her arms about his knees and refused to let him go. Desperate as they were the mob would not injure her and while they conferred together their anger cooled and eventually the man was allowed to go unharmed.

At one time a lighted lamp fell from a miner's hat dangerously near a great mass of gunpowder. With quick perception and ever present [illegible] Cynthia was the first to see the impending disaster. She ran swiftly to the spot and crushed out the light by sitting down on it.

When [illegible] years of age she was lowered over a precipice and helped to bring up the body of a child that had fallen over and been killed.

Again when threatened with death from ferocious animals her rare presence of mind did not desert her. She once killed a black bear and kept a pack of hungry coyotes at bay for a mile with only a stick for a weapon.

The miners were snowbound for months one winter and famine stared them in the face. The crust of the snow would not bear the weight of a man but Cynthia mounted on her little pony circled about further and further till when the hostile Indians no longer noticed her she finally reached the government post and relief was sent out to the imprisoned and suffering ones.

Little Cynthia Westover was the first white child to register in the Colorado schools. It was with the greatest difficulty that her education was obtained for she and her father were moving about so much. Nevertheless she taught a district school near Denver at the age of [illegible]. Her predecessor had left because he could not govern his pupils. But plucky Miss Westover was victorious in a tussle with a refractory half breed boy and word reached his father that he would be served in the same manner if he made her any trouble. She had no more difficulty for her grit won the old man over to her side.

Later she prepared herself for the normal department of the State university of Colorado. After [illegible] she took a full course in the Denver Commercial college.

By and by Miss Westover went to New York and served as inspector in the custom house after passing a civil service examination and afterwards held a position in the New York street cleaning department.

All this reads like a romance but it is the true story of one western woman who carried with her into the far east all that vim and brightness characteristic of the west. Withal she was most lovable beautiful practical and much of her charm is said to lie in this last mentioned virtue. She has been an inventor a musician and a linguist of unusual attainments.

For years she has held a position on the New York Tribune similar to that of the city editor only that all matter arriving at her desk from day to day relates only to women and children. She has had as many as 18 reporters under her direction and the success attending her work is proverbial.

Cynthia Westover did not become a bride until 1896 then she united her fortunes with those of John Alden an able and well known editor and journalist of New York. It is related that she was on duty at her desk all day and simply went home at night and was married in the most quiet matter of fact way. Their union has been eminently congenial and happy. This is in brief the story of Mrs Cynthia Westover Alden president general of the International Sunshine society.

The Society's Future

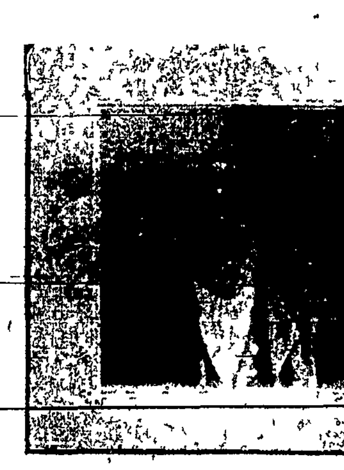

The rapid extension of the movement and its popularity among all classes are significant of strength and stability. While there is not the least bit of charity connected with the work of the society an amazing amount of good has been done for those people who are secluded shut out from an interchange of acts of kindness and good will. It has vast educational force in the sending out of great numbers of books, magazines, papers and pictures to those having no opportunity to procure them. Flowers games fancy work etc all serving to while away a weary hour. Holiday greetings and suggestions all take due place in the beneficent work.

Should any desire to join they may do so by writing to the headquarters 96 Fifth avenue New York City. German silver badges are but five cents each. The silver and rolled gold badges are 50 cents each, the solid gold ones $1.25. Stamps can be remitted for them.

Some members of their own accord have chosen to let the kind acts that constitute their dues take the form of regular contributions to the endowment fund ten, twenty five or fifty cents a week. Several are giving even more. Money has never been asked for and its officers serve without pay, but the passing on of articles sent by members requires cash for expressage or stamps. A stenographer is required to promptly answer the many letters that are received. Therefore endowment fund contributions are doubly welcome. All checks should be made out to the treasurer Mrs Mary Fiske Peck, Room 12 No 96 Fifth Avenue. J Augustus Rice of Bethlehem Pa was the first Sunshine member to suggest starting an endowment fund and his contribution is a dollar a month. Others adopted his suggestion and now contributions come in so that the society has a regular income.

Christmas is coming, seek out all the left over cards the booklets and lovely little trifles that gladdened your eyes and hearts last year and be prepared to pass them on, that they may again bear abroad their divine messages of love and cheer.

UNCLE "DAN" WESTOVER
Of Evans, Colo, president of the first Sunshine society in the state

The following is an extract from the reply made by "Uncle Dan"

Evans Colo, Sept. 10, 1900.

Your letter finds me in ill health, keeping my couch nearly all the time. But I am going to write you a few lines. You ask for some notes concerning my share in the work of Sunshine. My wife and I are kept busy distributing gifts of every description that would bring good cheer to some heart.

To our members we furnish reading and all kinds of presents that are sent to our branch are passed on, large quantities being sent from eastern branches through the mail. Our postmaster at Evans has a large soap box nailed up in the office marked in large letters "Uncle Dan."

We supply our poor house, jail and coal banks and all our poor families with good wholesome reading and furnish our Sunday schools with Sabbath reading picture cards, etc.

Speaking in regard to industrial chances for women Dinah Sturgis says in the July Overland Monthly:

Advertising needs women. Men understand the business of it up to a certain point. But the great majority of the advertising men live in the world of "hustle" and get there—and sometimes hustle so fast they stumble and fail to arrive or arrive in much less advantageous fashion than would be possible had they been coached cleverly. I do not think that the business of soliciting advertisements is ever likely to attract many women or to be successfully followed by many of those who attempt it. But as writers and illustrators of advertisements and as censors and critics of advertising women have a large field in which they are well equipped to succeed and to do so without altering or searing their [illegible] natures which some kinds of work they are trying to do bring to pass in all save the exceptional instances that merely prove the rule.

Prettier than the gold braid that is so lavishly used on autumn gowns is a gold embroidery done on coarse heavy linen that may be used for collars, yokes and vests or mixed with lace in [illegible] form an elaborate trimming. This embroidery is of course hand work says a fashion writer in the New York Tribune and without having the colors of what is generally termed Russian embroidery suggests it in pattern. It is only seen on expensive gowns, and yet it is an addition to a gown that makes pretty fancy work for idle afternoons.

Another idea to be noted when discussing autumn gowns in general is that of using cloth cut in fine stitched teeth. These rows of little points may lie over deeper points of a different color [illegible] and several rows may be used. The effect in black and white is very smart.

A word as to boleros. These little jackets of handsome material and most elaborately trimmed are being sold for a song in the Paris shops. This is the best indication that the garment has had its day. To be sure some odd short forms of a bolero appear in some of the new models but for serious street suits the tailors are using a longer jacket. The directoire jacket is at present considered the favorite model for a shirt and jacket suit.

The touch of gold seems to be used on every general costume. The street suit the elaborate dinner gown and the unconventional negligee are all conspicuously indebted to it.

In the autumn frocks are a good many blouses that bag considerably over the belt in front. A good many of the dressmakers do not hesitate to refer to this style of bodice as the most popular form for the coming season. As skirts grow fuller about the bottom the arrival of the blouse is only to be expected and only larger sleeves are needed for the fashions to resemble those of a dozen years ago. There is a saying among the couturieres that fashions return every seven years.

What seems really to have taken the place of the bolero is a blouse that tucks into a belt but which has a jacket effect through being opened to show chemisette and vest. A pretty example of this style is a costume made of a light weight cloth of iron gray stitched heavily with black. The skirt is stitched about the bottom and over this is a tunic opened in front, and also stitched in several rows. The blouse is ornamented with points cut of cloth that extend from under the arms to the bust, and then make a shawl rever that ends in the belt. This leaves a pointed chemisette of black silk tucked and trimmed with small gold buttons extending almost to the waist. The back of the jacket has a little roll over collar of black, and the belt is of black. This same model is attractive in a useful navy blue serge made dainty with chemisette of tucked ecru lawn.

"Are we to see the complete passing away of women of leisure?" asks the editor of the Century. "There are moments when one asks himself that question with genuine apprehension and the moments are likely to be most frequent during the holiday months when nature herself appears to insist that the strained cords of life shall be a little loosened. To be a man of leisure has always according to the laws of our national code involved a later reproach but so powerful is the influence of the spirit of the times among us that to be a woman of leisure may soon seem almost as bad. The women who work in one way or another, because they must work to live are joined in yearly greater numbers by women who work because they choose to work in order to be independent. Outside of this the clubs and societies that promote literary, patriotic, philanthropic activities in those who have no professional labors, and the spell of out door life and its vigorous sports over women who without these things would be quite idle have so wrought upon feminine existence that the type of woman who meets and greets you in her quiet drawing-room as one who has long days of repose behind her and looks calmly forward to others of the same tenor is becoming rare to the point of impressing one as an exotic.

It is unthinkable that any one should seriously wish to pick a quarrel at this late day with the new quickening interests of women's lives. The subject has passed beyond the province of discussion. Nevertheless it is an assured fact that if we were to have only busy women in the future and women hurried and harried the whole of life would be incomparably the poorer for us. Somewhere in the stress and strain of endeavor and advance there must be stopping places where one may rest and dream a little, centers there must be of some sort where one may momentarily drop out from the moving column and free of the noise and dust feel one's soul. There must be a pause now and then. There must be intervals however few and far between for the deeper stiller inhalations that bring renewal and refreshment and enable one to start again and start straight. Those centers those intervals it has always been the primary and essential function of women to render possible and it must ever be. It belongs to them alone to perform that function and if they omit to do so there is nothing to make good the loss."

The Boarding School Girl

The girl who is booked for boarding school this fall begins to feel the tingle of expectancy as the month of September approaches. Her wardrobe is doubtless already planned and she is now only waiting for the fall goods to be exhibited before making the necessary purchases. Of course she must have one or more tailor made suits. Then there is the hat to wear with them the shirt waists the gloves and the shoes. There is no great change in the felt shapes the Rough Rider still holding its own, and indeed it has for outing all summer. Shirt waists are made as plain as possible in order to set smoothly under the close tailor jacket. Shoes in the latest fashion are made to lace, as they set more smoothly over the instep. A light weight calfskin is the most popular material in shoes whether in ties or in laced shoes.

Many boarding schools specify as to what the boarders shall bring with them and in this case the list frequently includes three sheets and three pairs of pillow cases six towels and a dozen napkins. All pieces must be plainly marked as also should all underwear. As to the amount of the latter, six suits of everything should be included in a girl's wardrobe. Then there should be one or two pretty dresses for evening and to wear on special occasions. There should be also a dress hat.

There should be a rainy day skirt, made sufficiently short to suit the requirements of bad weather and to complete the costume an umbrella marked and also a pair of rubbers and the latter should certainly be marked. Nothing is so indispensable in the shape of a wrap as a golf cape. It serves for weather and it serves in a thousand ways for driving and for an extra wrap to be worn over the jacket. As for gloves, a good pair of castor gloves and a pair or two of dressed kid are sufficient to start a girl with. They wear them out fast enough and the supply has to be replenished from home frequently.

No outfit is complete without a comfortable eiderdown wrapper, which serves in case of illness and is also valuable as a bathrobe. A pretty flannel sacque will also be found to fill a want as it saves a waist sometimes when the wearer has a little time in her room.

Every girl is expected to furnish her own napkin ring. Then there are the little ornaments which she brings from home—her photographs books and numerous things dear to a girl's heart on account of some association. In some schools decorations are not encouraged even not allowed but they give her room a homelike appearance and she is likely to be pretty homesick before she becomes accustomed to her surroundings. She should have her own supply of note paper, her pen blotter sealing wax and postage stamps. Then of course there should be a tiny work basket fully fitted out in order that she may demonstrate that old adage "A stitch in time saves nine."

In case a school expects each boarder to furnish her own bed with blankets counterpane and so on in addition to the bed linen the rule is usually set forth plainly in the school circular. Lace curtains are an addition to the coziness of a room. The latter should be made to look as homelike as possible for the memory of it will be a pleasant one in after years. (New York Tribune.

For the Children.

They Both Rode.

The car remained at a standstill for so long a time says the Evening Star, that everyone wondered if something were wrong. It was soon seen however that a sturdy little urchin was very tenderly helping a lame child aboard and as the car moved on his cheery "goodbye" called a smile to the cripple's wan face.

The latter seated himself so that he could look out the window and every few minutes he waved his hand at some one on the street. The other people in the car became curious and looking out, saw a little fellow running along the sidewalk, keeping pace with them.

"Who is that?" asked a lady of the lame boy.

"Why, that's Jim," was the proud response.

"Yes dear, but who is Jim?"

"Why, Jim's my brother of course."

By this time everyone was listening and smiling in sympathy.

"Oh! I see," said the lady, "that's the boy that helped you on the car. But why does he not ride with you?"

"Why," he said, "we only had a nickel and Jim said I must ride. You see," he added after a pause, "I can't walk well but Jim, he can run fine."

"See! What is this?" the lady said.

With eyes big with delight, the child caught up a 5-cent piece that had miraculously appeared in his torn little cap that lay on the seat between the lady and himself. And then with frantic gestures he hailed "Jim," who boarded the car at the next corner.

It would be hard to say who was the happiest on that car during the remainder of the trip but surely the boys thought that they were.

There should always be in the nursery or sitting room a good globe [illegible] on a stand and two maps—one of the world and another of the United States. The mother must absolutely learn something of the new methods of teaching or she will fall into the old rut and this lapsing into old and slipshod methods means the loss of much knowledge and mental training to the child. A few visits to good schools and a little earnest study of the new text books will give her a world of help. One point is to avoid needless detail. The salient features of geography should be emphasized and illustrated so that it will be impossible for the child to think of an interesting story without recalling a correlative important fact. Books of travel when properly written are especially helpful and interesting in thus linking fact and story together and are so abundant that there is no difficulty in making a choice.—(Woman's Home Companion.

A New Parlor Game for Children.

A new game for children is called "Who Owns the Eyes?" and at little affairs it is certainly a source of great merriment and surprise. It is played as follows. Fasten a piece of cotton or muslin, or even newspaper, across the door, cut two holes in it an inch in circumference about an inch apart and about three feet from the floor. Place a chair behind this improvised screen and then divide the company into two parties—one to remain in the room as spectators and guessers and the other to go behind the screen as performers. The first performer sits in the chair places his or her eyes to the holes, and another of the performers asks, "Who owns the eyes?" If a correct response is given the performers clap their hands and another performer takes the chair. After a while the parties change places and the performers become the guessers.—(Lena Burd in the American Queen.

Paris Fashion Letter.

Paris, Sept 4.—The early winter wardrobe of the boarding school bound girl comes in for its share of consideration just now. The French mother's efforts are mostly spent in amassing a quantity of lingerie for her daughter that [illegible] the entire years of her boarding school life. In so many of the French boarding schools an effort is made to check girlish vanities by insisting on a demure black uniform being worn by the pupils. The individual taste and refinement that cannot be evinced in the gowns of these girls finds an outlet in the fashioning of their lingerie. Not that it is fussy and befrilled but it is [illegible] of fine linen [illegible] and there is an abundance of it. Of course those remarks apply only to the convent-bred girls who are largely in the majority at Paris.

In the ultra fashionable schools where girls from all parts of the world gather for those "finishing touches" cherished doubly for being acquired at Paris, dressing is of primary importance. The wardrobe of these young women includes reception gowns dance gowns and elaborate theater toilettes but the stout every day regulation school frock is "conspicuous by its absence."

The other day in making the rounds of the shops that cater only to these young women I inquired especially as to the needs of the boarding school girl. The head of the establishment—(a Parisian bred English woman) gave me some suggestions that literally rung with good common sense.

She especially warned mothers against completing a girl's winter wardrobe in September. She strongly advised that the heavy winter coat, a best gown and a best hat should be added about the 1st of December or even as late as the Christmas holidays if they were to be spent at home. Checked or shot materials with a rough surface she thought should be given the preference over smooth cloth for school gowns since the latter reflected so frankly in ink or grease spots.

Another item she touched on that mothers will do well to bear in mind was the advisability of buying material enough to renew sleeves in all school gowns.

The models shown me at this shop were attractive up-to-date and above all decidedly practical.

Among the school gowns there was one built of rough checked blue and dark red material. The skirt was made with a panel of plaited red cashmere at the front overlapped just half way down by points of the material held with a large perforated button in gun metal. Folds of dark blue velvet piped with red taffeta gave a finish to the edges of the panel. Over the hips the skirt was close fitting and the fullness at the back was supplied with a single box plait.

The corsage was an easy fitting blouse of the checked material with a plastron of plaited red cashmere. It was trimmed with a broad round collar of dark blue velvet that fastened at the bust line with clasps in perforated gun metal. The material bordering on the plastron was edged with blue velvet folds piped with red taffeta. The sleeves of the checked material were close fitting and without trimming in spite of the narrow blue velvet [illegible] that was almost hidden by the pouch front of the blouse there was a decided princess effect sought in the fashioning of this gown. The red cashmere extended in one unbroken line from the top of the high straight collar to the edge of the skirt.

The majority of these girlish gowns are built either on the princess lines or they boast a bolero effect over a pouched plastron of a contrasting color. Very little women who have not entered their teens will wear princess frocks of white pique under long [illegible] princess coats all through the autumn months.

Misses too will have an extensive choice among long coats this season. Both empire and princess models are very much in evidence. For school wear nothing is more serviceable than the chic short reefers in rough blue or red cheviot with their glistening gilt buttons. The shops are offering too for young girls elaborate Louis XIV coats with reveres and cuffs of pompadour silk.

Among the latest winter models there was one of wood brown cloth trimmed in lizard green rep silk that was quite novel in design and dressy enough to belong in the category of "Sunday gowns." The skirt was made close fitting over the hips and the fullness at the back was held in two narrow box plaits. The entire apron was made of the green silk laid in narrow overlapping flat folds.

The corsage was fashioned to give the effect of a short cloth bolero over a silk blouse. All the silk visible was laid in overlapping folds like those of the apron. At the front the bolero was very much cut away and along the edges was trimmed with novel plaited reveres caught down into the ceinture. From under the belt they peeped out again in the form of short jabots. These reveres and the ceinture were of deep seal brown velvet faced with green. The same brown velvet was repeated around the edges of the cloth sleeves.

The hat to be worn with this gown was a large soft felt repeating the same shade of lizard green as the gown's trimming. Around the Tam O'Shanter crown there was a twist of seal brown velvet terminating at the right side under a bunch of green and brown tips.

A touch of Swede here and there on hats on jackets and on gowns adds a decided [illegible] to the little rough and ready every day toilettes.

A chic little school frock for a young girl of eight was made of [illegible] green cheviot shot and spotted with deep buff. The skirt was a box plaited affair trimmed at the top with straps of russet brown Swede put on to give the form of a pointed yoke. These terminated at the left side in loops drawn through tiny gun metal buckles.

The waist which was attached to the skirt had the form of a plaited blouse. Between the plaits there were panels of [illegible] cloth inserted so as to be hardly visible. Straps of the russet Swede were put on in the form of a round yoke. These terminated at the left shoulder with buckle trimmed loops. The sleeves were puffed as far as the elbow and from there to the waists were close fitting and ornamented with Swede straps.

Mr Gladstone to Boys

What Mr Gladstone has to say to young folks about success in life ought to be worth reading and worth thinking about:

Be sure that every one of you has his place and vocation on this earth, and that it rests with himself to find it.

Do not believe those who too lightly say effort—honest manful humble effort—does not succeed by its reflected success which indeed too easily and too early gained not seldom serves like winning the first throw of the dice to blind and stupefy.

Get knowledge all you can.

Be thorough in all you do and remember that though ignorance often may be innocence pretension is always despicable. But you like men be strong and exercise your strength.

Work onward and upward, and may the blessing of the Most High soothe your care clear your vision and crown your labors with reward.—(Union Gospel News.

It seems most fitting that the entertainment tendered to their friends by Mrs. Angenette Upham Peavey and her daughter, Dr. Josephine Peavey, 726 North Tejon street, Friday at 3:30 p. m. should be devoted to the subject of art, for their perfectly appointed home is an embodiment of the artistic. Doubly was this so when exquisitely decked with myriads of bright seasonable blossoms. Out of the high recesses of the parlor glowed scarlet gladiolas and dahlias. In ingeniously arranged effect in palms, ferns, white cosmos, asters and dwarf dahlias reflected in the mantel mirror. Mrs. F. A. Thompson of Denver held the rapt attention of fully fifty ladies while in easy, conversational way she gave a most complete and scholarly talk, "Madonna in Art," consisting of a review of "The Madonna in Art" by Estelle M. Hurl. She said in part: "Madonnas are divided into five classes: the Portrait Madonna; the Enthroned Madonna; the Madonna in Gloria; the Pastoral Madonna; the Madonna of the Home Environment. Of these the largest class is the Enthroned Madonna." The talk was beautifully illustrated by fifty pictures of Madonnas by Raphael, de Credi, Murillo, Correggio, Defregger, Bodenhausen, Duerer, Holbein, Bougereau, Van Dyke, de Sarto and other famous painters.

MANITOU

All about are the signs of the end of the gay season. The hotels, with but an exception or two, are closed and silent as though they had never been peopled by a merry crowd of pleasure seekers. Only the Cliff remains open and affords a glimpse of what the height of the season must have been, to the late tourists. Manitou is now at its best and it is a pity that more people do not know of it and arrange to pass the autumn there.

Old Times, Old Friends, Old Love.

There are no days like the good old days
The days when we were youthful,
When humankind were pure of mind,
And speech and deeds were truthful;
Before a love for sordid gold
Became man's ruling passion,
And before each dame and maid became
Slaves to the tyrant Fashion!

There are no girls like the good old girls
Against the world I'd stake 'em!
As buxom and smart and clean of heart
As the Lord knew how to make 'em!
They were rich in spirit and common sense,
A piety all supportin';
They could bake and brew, and had taught school, too,
And they made the likeliest courtin'!

There are no boys like the good old boys—
When we were boys together!
When the grass was sweet to the brown bare feet
That dimpled the laughing heather;
When the pewee sung to the summer dawn
Of the bee in the billowy clover,
Or down by the mill the whippoorwill
Echoed his night song over.

There is no love like the good old love—
The love that mother gave us!
We are old, old men, yet we pine again
For the precious grace God save us!
So we dream and dream of the good old times,
And our hearts grow tenderer, fonder,
As those dear old dreams bring soothing gleams
Of Heaven away off yonder!

WOMEN'S CLUB NEWS

THE following letter is cordially indorsed by the entire board of management of the N. F. W. C.:

To the President and Members of Musical Clubs.

"Let me make the songs of a nation and I care not who makes its laws," has been quoted so often that every music lover knows it is a very familiar saying, but its truth and applicability were never more convincing at the present time in America.

Among the many influences which are inducing and promoting a high civic life in our country is the art of music, and in the front rank stands the work of the executive board and delegates of the National Federation of Musical clubs. As the aims and results of this work are not clearly understood, the following facts are presented for your earnest consideration.

Musical clubs vary greatly in their resources, from the club small in numbers, smaller in the amount in its treasury, struggling for its existence against adverse circumstances of all kinds, in a community often indifferent, if not actually unsympathetic, to the club with full coffers, with a large and enthusiastic membership, and in a musical town or city whose active and hearty co-operation, when concerts are given, may always be counted upon, yet the high aim in both cases is the same.

Membership in the national Federation of Musical clubs is needed by all musical clubs, in some cases for the help they may secure, in others for the assistance they may render—for the National Federation of Musical clubs exists for the purpose of promoting all that is best in music in this country.

We would call attention to work already accomplished:

First—The artists' committee we hope in time will become one of the important factors of the federation. If officers of clubs would realize the great advantage gained by securing artists directly through this committee, much better terms could be made with the different managers.

During the current year several hundred dollars have been saved by those clubs who availed themselves of this privilege. While the artists committee send out a list of artists whose terms are already secured, any artist desired by any club in the federation can be engaged through the chairman of this committee.

Second—The Bureau of Registry has supplied music of a higher order by publishing a list of members of clubs in the federation, who, endorsed by the president and officers of these clubs, are willing to give recitals for their expenses or for a small remuneration. This has brought good music within the reach of smaller clubs, and has enabled many to add to the number of their recitals.

Third—A librarian has been appointed who has issued a catalogue of music owned by clubs in the federation—vocal, instrumental and concerted, which can be rented at a low price to cover expressage and wear and tear.

Fourth—A plan of study has been drawn up covering seven years, which is available for the clubs of the federation and very suggestive. Also a constitution and by-laws in like manner helpful for reference in organizing or re-organizing clubs.

Beside these lines of definite work, many letters of advice have been written when requested and the methods of more successful and flourishing clubs made helpful to those struggling or in difficulties.

Furthermore, the bi-ennial of the National Federation of Musical clubs, a great musical festival, occurring as it does every two years, brings together delegates from musical clubs from all parts of the United States, and at this festival there is not only to be heard music of various kinds—beautiful, inspiring and interesting—but the interchange of plans and hopes is made possible, which gives encouragement and enthusiasm and makes practical progress for all. If in some cases delegates cannot be present, full reports are furnished.

The labors of the executive board of the National Federation of Musical clubs are purely those of love for the cause of music, and it asks the co-operation of all musical clubs in this country, that with their intelligent and suggestive sympathy it may be helped to do its work wisely and effectively. The possibilities of the work are infinite—the results such as to command the respect of every loyal American citizen.

The board of directors and the programme committee of the State Federation of Women's clubs met at Unity church, Denver, last Wednesday to confer together concerning the programme for the meeting at Canon City, September 25-27. The subject of school savings banks will have prominent place. Up to this time, with the exception of what has been accomplished in Colorado Springs, little has been known of the plan outside of Denver. Now, there is to be literature relating to the subject distributed over the state. Already there is considerable interest manifested and a special article on school savings banks, to be found in another portion of today's Gazette, will have great value to all who desire to learn more about the plan.

A Perfect Woman.

She was a phantom of delight,
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely apparition sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of twilight fair;
Like twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful dawn.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A spirit, yet a woman too!
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A creature not too bright and good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears and smiles.
And now I see with eye serene,
The very pulse of the machine;
A being, breathing thoughtful breath,
A traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength and skill;
A perfect woman nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort and command;
And yet a spirit still and bright,
With something of an angel light.

A Receipt for Keeping Young.

She was as fresh in color as a girl, her hair without a touch of gray, her face without a wrinkle, and she felt, I am sure, as she certainly looked, far younger than I did. So I asked her finally:

"How do you keep so fresh and young with all your great family?"

She looked at me for a moment and then laughed a merry little laugh. "You see," she said, "I haf my von little naps."

"Your what?" I asked, puzzled to understand her.

"My von little naps," she repeated.

"But tell me, I do not understand," I said.

"Vy, so," she said in her pretty broken English, "About twelf o'clock, or maybe von or maybe two, as you like it besser, I takes de baby, vichever is de baby, and I goes to de room and takes my naps."

"But if the baby won't sleep at that time?" I objected.

She shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, he sleep all right."

"But there are so many things to do while the baby sleeps," I went on.

"I will haf my naps," was her smiling answer.

"But," I urged, "supposing something happens to the other children while you and the baby are asleep?"

Then she did stare at me. "There could be net'ing happen to dose children vot dat I not get my von little naps," she said indignantly.

I gave it up. This closed the argument.—(Harper's Bazar.

Novel Wall Decoration.

Woman's propensity for gathering samples needs no comment, but few ever heard of these samples being put to any practical use. But a Chicago woman has evolved a very clever decoration from them, the samples in this case being of wall papers. She papered her husband's den with them and more than three thousand different patterns are represented. Each piece is cut in a geometrical design with mathematical precision, and so artistically have the various shades been employed that an exquisite mosiac effect is the result. An elaborate border makes a finish at the top of the walls, and an eight-pointed star in gorgeous colors covers the center of the ceiling. The whole is protected from dust and dirt by two coats of varnish, and can be easily cleaned. It is a novel and exceedingly pretty decoration, and one, too, that didn't cost anything, for samples can be had for the asking.—(Exchange.

To Make Conversation.

A little suggestion about place cards for a luncheon or dinner: Instead of having the names of the guests upon them, cards may be prepared by cutting pictures and letters from magazines and newspapers and pasting them neatly and carefully to make some illustrated device, sentence or verse characteristic of the guest and the occasion. The guests walk around the table seeking their places, and the various cards are apt to put the company at once at ease and to be the source of a free and general flow of conversation, a thing so really hard to be sure of. If the company is one of intimates, familiar with one another's affairs, a very delightful and mirth provoking addition to the dessert may be made by having a surprise "skeleton story." Its subject matter should deal with the doings of the various members of the company. The story is written complete except that no adjectives are used in the narrative, but as many places as possible are left blank for them. The company is then called upon to name adjectives in turn and the blank spaces are filled in. The completed tale is then read aloud, and wonderful and fearful the medley.—(Sadie American, in the July Woman's Home Companion.

There is one small girl in [illegible] who has a poor opinion of women's conventions and congresses. She is but 10, and a decade later may change her mind. Her mamma was relating an incident of a recent woman's convention. "The chair," she said, "had no [illegible] been said by the floor." Right here the little miss broke in with: "Mercy [illegible] mamma! Do the chairs and floor [illegible] too, down there?"

And the husband and father is laughing yet.—(The Washington Star.

Miss Imogene Howard, the first [illegible] graduate of the [illegible] school, has gone to the Paris [illegible] tion, sent by the New York [illegible] as one of the [illegible] Greater New York. [illegible] third in the list.

TRIM SHIRT WAISTS

To look trim in her shirt waist seems to be an impossibility to the average summer girl. Apparently she goes on the principle, says a fashion writer in the New York Herald, that because the waist is loose it requires no attention beyond putting on and buttoning. Nothing could be further from the fact. Careful adjustment is necessary to give the good-fitting, well-put-together appearance.

Large safety pins or white headed pins three inches long should be regarded as complemental of every shirt waist. Use three, or perhaps four, of these, preferably the white-headed ones. Having put on and buttoned a shirt waist, first pin the back down to the corsets below the waist line.

Pull the skirt well down before adjusting the pin. This improves the fit and reveals the curve of the back, one of the prettiest of feminine lines. Next see that the fronts of the waist from the under arm seam to the gathers are smooth on the figure, then pin each side securely down to the corset on a line with the back. This done, the dress skirt may be put on, and that fastened in the back to the shirt with the fourth pin. About the waist then goes the belt, and the arrangement is complete.

Shirts are sometimes made with a gathering string which pulls from the back of the waist, tying in front, and these are worn by a number of deluded women, who fancy that because they tie a string about the waist they are getting a trig effect. On the contrary, of all shirts this style is most "sloppy." The gathers spread unbecomingly, pull up out of place, and after an hour of wearing the whole waist has the appearance of trying to wrest itself from its owner.

Some women have eyes sewed on the backs of their shirts, with corresponding hooks on the dress skirt. This, as far as it goes, is recommended for trigness, but is disastrous to the shirt, for the weight of the skirt is often too great a strain: moreover, the eyes frequently tear the fabric in the wash and never fail to rust, leaving two bad stains.

Shirt waists wrinkled in front and back, pulling up from the belt and generally askew, are more commonly seen than is necessary. There is no reason why they should not fit as well as the body of a tailor gown. But it does not all lie with the tailor. He will fit the thing well, but is defrauded of bonus to guarantee its perfect shape. So the woman, if she be trig, shapes it herself. And this she does by pulling it in close all around to her figure and firmly fastening it to her corsets with three long white-headed pins.

This trig little costume is of dotted and checked blue and white French flannel. The blouse and skirt are box pleated and the yoke both of the corsage and skirt are plain with a smart decoration of white taffeta strappings and trim little bows.

MR. BRYAN AND THE SILVER REPUBLICANS.

WHEN a candidate is honored by a party with the nomination for a high office it has become customary to make the formal notification of the fact a matter of some ceremony. Both Mr. McKinley and Mr. Roosevelt received the news of their nomination from a formal committee appointed by the Republican national convention and answered with set speeches. Mr. Bryan was thus formally notified by the Democrats at Indianapolis and by the Populists at Topeka, and gave his formal acceptance.

But Mr. Bryan was also nominated by another convention of another party, that of the Silver Republicans, a party that is peculiarly representative of what was the main issue four years ago, and a party upon which the Democrats must depend for their success in several western states. But the formal notification of this nomination and its acceptance by Mr. Bryan has been strangely delayed and now we are informed on good authority that the public notification has been abandoned in deference to Mr. Bryan's wishes. "He says the people are becoming tired of so much notification, and besides he hasn't time now to formulate a speech of acceptance."

Our Silver Republican friends will doubtless be properly impressed with the fact that Mr. Bryan hasn't the time to formulate a speech of acceptance of their nomination, but the fact of the matter is that Mr. Bryan is not anxious at this particular time to call attention to himself as the champion of silver. In fact it would be peculiarly awkward to accept a nomination from the Silver Republicans at a time when the peripatetic candidate is doing everything in his power to make the people forget the silver issue. Mr. Bryan is willing to accept the Silver Republican votes but he does not wish to advertise himself as that party's candidate. Without desiring to give offense to anyone he wishes to call attention to the fact that he is accompanied on the ticket by Mr. Stevenson, late of Cleveland, Stevenson & Co., and not by Mr. Towne.

SHOULD GALVESTON BE REBUILT?

THERE are questions involved in the rebuilding of Galveston that are of interest to the whole country. It is urged by those interested in the city that their all is there, and that so much has been invested in the public works including the harbor making, that it must not and can not be abandoned.

But it has been apparent for many years, and many have remarked it, that Galveston was liable at any time to meet with just such a disaster as has now befallen it.

It is a fair question for discussion whether, because of the private interests involved, any community has the right to rebuild what has proven to be a veritable death trap to so many thousands of people, not only including citizens of Galveston, but also visitors from other places. If the city is rebuilt and grows in the future to large proportions, it will be only a question of time when a larger calamity will befall its inhabitants, for in such a trap as it must always be, the deaths under similar conditions would be proportionately greater with a larger population.

It is a function of government to protect its citizens from danger to their lives from avoidable causes. If a local community persists in allowing menacing causes of danger to exist, the state takes the matter in hand. If the state fails to come up to its duty the national government intervenes as in the recent plague scare in California.

It has been demonstrated that the island upon which Galveston is built is in danger of being storm swept at any time and almost without warning. It is an attractive place and at all times has within its borders many transient visitors who as in the present case share the fate of those who build a city upon the sand.

Has not the general government as much right to protect its citizens from such a death trap as it would have to protect them from an epidemic of fever or cholera in the same city? In the case of disease no outsider is allowed to take his chances in visiting such a city. The government says: "You shall not endanger your own life." Why has it not also the right to say to the city, "You shall not endanger the lives of thousands of Americans."

MRS. M'CLURG IN PARIS.

"LE TEMPS," a leading journal of Paris, and other well known dailies of France's metropolis, speak in very flattering terms of the lecture delivered recently at the exposition by our well known towns-woman, Mrs. Gilbert McClurg.

From the Paris journals we glean that Mrs. McClurg, by invitation of the International Congress of Ethnology, to which she is delegate from the United States, gave August 30 in the College de France, introduced by Baron von Zuylen, her studies on the "People of the Pueblos and Cliff Dwellings," illustrated with stereopticon.

Monsieur Raynaud, a professor of the Sorbonne, made flattering comments on the lecture, and at the close of the hour M. Lennire, president of the Ethnological Congress, made a most gratifying and commendatory speech, honoring Mrs. McClurg. This was followed by a splendid tribute to Mrs. McClurg's lecture by Prof. Wilson, curator of the Washington Museum. The lecture was attended by a large audience, composed nearly entirely of savants of international reputation.

"Le Temps," Paris, Aug. 30, says: "Mrs. Gilbert McClurg of Colorado Springs lectured this afternoon before the International Congress of Ethnology, in the Palace of Congresses, on the "People of the Pueblos." The lecture, which was listened to by a large audience, was finely illustrated by stereopticon slides. Mrs. Gilbert McClurg, a handsome woman, spoke most eloquently and interestingly. She is a United States delegate to the Congress of Ethnology."

Mrs. McClurg is honored also as a delegate to the Exposition Congress of Americanists and has also been invited to address that congress, speaking in French, on the same subject, "The Pueblos and Cliff Dwellings."

THE TREATMENT OF VICIOUS DOGS.

THE treatment of vicious dogs in such a city as Colorado Springs should be prompt, vigorous and effective. They should be killed at once. Within the past six months two children have died from dog bites received in this city, and yesterday morning another child was seriously bitten.

There is not in Colorado Springs the ordinary excuse for the keeping of vicious dogs. Tramps are few and infrequent and burglaries are seldom known. The laws against vagrants are strictly enforced and the police will quickly respond to any complaints on this score.

A savage dog is a public danger as well as a public nuisance, and like other nuisances he should be summarily suppressed.

The application of the remedy is simple. There is an ordinance against keeping savage dogs. The time to make complaint is before the dog bites someone and not afterwards, and the police have full authority to act in the matter.

THE HIGH SCHOOL CADETS.

COLORADO SPRINGS has very good reason to be proud of the excellent showing made by the military department of the High school. The cadets have been a prominent feature in school life for several years past, and the effect of this military organization has been excellent. The young men who have been enrolled as members of the company have not only shown a decided gain in physique and deportment, but the general effect has also been good. The taste of military discipline has been an advantage to them in many ways, and the lessons of obedience, promptness and good order have been a permanent benefit.

The Gazette regrets that anything should occur which should hamper the companies in their work; but equipments will wear out, guns will get old and broken, even with the best of care, and in such a place as Colorado Springs increasing numbers will surpass all provisions for them, unless these are constantly added to.

There are at the present time about 100 members on the roll of the cadets, and 35 or more could be added to the ranks if the equipments were ready for use. For these young soldiers there are provided about 60 guns, many of them in very poor condition, and the other necessary equipment is equally deficient. It would be almost impossible under the present regulations to secure from the United States government what is necessary in order to give the High school cadets what they ought to have and what they deserve. An effort is now being made to secure the proper outfit from the state authorities, and we earnestly hope that this attempt may be successful.

There is no doubt about the value of the organization to the city and the state, independent of the personal effect it has upon the boys, and outside of the benefit that it is as a part of our educational system, the training received by these young men offers a very important adjunct to the military system of the state. A great many of the boys who have been members of the High school cadets have enlisted in the armies in the United States, and a still larger number would be available at all times if called upon for military service with an advantage of a preliminary training of sufficient extent and duration to insure making them good soldiers in regular service. If there are 150 boys and young men of this city who are sufficiently interested in military drill to assume voluntarily the burden of regular attendance at drill and submission to military discipline the state ought to [illegible] all [illegible] along this line, and should see to it that they are properly equipped with guns and necessary side arms.

We hope that those who are interested in the cadets will receive from the business and professional men of the city all possible help towards securing from the state authorities that which they seek.

THE DECLINE OF MAN.

SOMEONE has been stuffing the New York Sun, as witness the following editorial:

"THE DECLINE OF MAN IN COLORADO.

"Colorado is one of the glories of the woman suffragists. Possibly it may become a state in which male suffrage does not exist because there are no males left. This too complete triumph of woman suffrage seems indicated by some statistics which are giving the Coloradoans pause and making them feel that they are only a remnant destined to be swept away by the superior sex. There are more females than males in the state. The birth statistics are distinctly unfavorable to the dethroned tyrant, Man. The disproportion is not actually great yet, but it is disheartening when the death statistics are looked at. In the first six months of 1900, 786 more males than females died. Not so many males born and more die! Gloomy visions rise in the minds of the vanishing race of men in Colorado. What are all her treasures underneath the earth if her men go into it so quickly?

"The men of Colorado are notably polite. They may not all believe in woman suffrage, but they are willing to give the woman suffragists a free field. A manless state, a Commonwealth of Woman, a female Utopia and paradise of stateswomen—this is something that a man may be willing to die for. To be sure, there might be reservations where men could be preserved as specimens, a wonder and a show, as buffaloes are; and importation might be encouraged. But not all the inhabitants of other states are as urbane as those of Colorado. After the gradual extinction of the present stock, men would be reluctant to settle in Colorado. The precept 'Make way for the ladies' may be carried to excess. 'Let Amazonia flourish, undisturbed of men,' would be the sentiment of sagacious bosoms.

"It is just to say that under unmixed female rule Colorado would not be likely to have less wise and reticent governors than our old friend the Hon. Davis Hector Waite, for instance."

If the Sun had adhered to the motto it once carried, it would have required verification of these alleged statistics, which the Gazette denies.

But if it were true that there was an excess of female births and a deficiency of female deaths, a very good reason might be found for it in the fact that Colorado is one of the few states where woman is treated with reasonable fairness in matters political. If the girl angels have any choice as to the locality in which their earthly career is to be spent, or if the kindly spirits that watch over their destinies regard their welfare in such matters, it is perfectly natural that they should select Colorado as the dwelling place for as many of their favorites as possible.

Nevertheless the Sun's statistics are wrong, and its argument unreliable. Equal suffrage, far from being disagreeable to the masculine portion of the state, is an added attraction, and an excess of womankind, if such a thing were possible, would be worth millions as an immigration advertisement.

AN EXAMPLE OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

LAST fall Fremont county Republicans nominated a straight McKinley Republican ticket and elected it all with the one exception of a county commissioner, who was defeated by local influences at Florence. The majorities averaged 400, the highest being for county treasurer, who had a majority of 900.

The anti-McKinley plurality in 1896 was 3,745.

The plurality for Thomas against Wolcott in 1898 was 747.

If the other counties of the state do as well as Fremont, there ought to be no question of Republican success this fall.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 13, 1900.

To the Editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette:

In an argument A bets that the rank of lieutenant general, now held by General Miles, has never before been held by a general of the United States. B bets that it was held by Generals Washington, Sheridan and Grant. Will you kindly settle the dispute through the columns of your paper or by mail? I enclose five cents for a copy of paper containing decision. Very truly, M. M. L.

Washington was commissioned by the continental congress general and commander-in-chief of the army of the united colonies. He resigned December 23, 1783. He was commissioned July 3, 1798, lieutenant general. An act of March 3, 1799, created the office of general of the armies of the United States but the office was never filled. Washington died as lieutenant general. The first officer with the rank of general under the present government of the United States was Grant. Sherman and Sheridan also held this office. Schofield was created a lieutenant general by act of congress just previous to his retirement in 1895. Grant was made lieutenant general in February, 1864, the office being created for him by congress; Sherman was appointed lieutenant general July 5, 1866; and Sheridan, March 4, 1869.

Denver Republicans are very much pleased with the excellent ticket nominated by the county convention and predict its certain success in the coming election.

THE SUMMONS.

Who hath lain in his blind at the dawn,
when the canvas-back swiftly is flying?
Who hath heard the loud swishing of wings, and the great wild goose noisily crying?
Who hath pillowed his head
On the hemlock boughs spread
Where is heard the stream's lullaby song, and the wind through the pine trees is sighing?

Who hath seen the trout leap from his pool, when the daylight is rosily breaking?
Who hath marked the elk sniffing the breeze, when the quail in the bushes is waking?
Who hath heard the grouse flush
In the deerberry brush,
Of the crackling of twigs on the hill, where the black-tail his antlers is shaking?

Who hath wandered alone in the grove, when the wood-dove is plaintively calling?
Who hath heard the glad sound of the brook, and its rush-bounded waters are falling?
Who hath scented the breeze
Through the tamarack trees,
Or known the deep forest's wild life, with its mysteries deep and enthralling?

It is there we are summoned at last, with our guns and our rods and our traces,
To list to the voice of the night, with the big camp-fire's light on our faces;
To hear the weird howls
When the cowardly wolf prowls,
And feel the free life of the wood, with the manifold joys it embraces.

Just So.

"After all," remarked the revenue stamp, "I am the original stamp of approval."

Had Him Guessing.

"Say, what time does the 6:40 train leave?"

"Pulls out at 6:25, but it's an hour late tonight."

"Then it'll leave here on time?"

"Yes."

He Knew.

"And what was Caesar's occupation?" asked the teacher.

"He worked in a foundry," replied the freckle-faced boy on the front seat.

"How do you know?"

"Didn't he cast a die?"

The President's Letter.

(Washington Star.)

The president in his letter of acceptance gives striking evidence once more of his power as a writer and his grasp as a political leader. The ablest men in his party are on the stump dealing with the issues of the hour, but by no one of them have those issues been treated with an arrangement more logical or in a style more clear and attractive than are employed in the deliverance which appears in print today. The letter is long, but there was much to be said. It was necessary not only to state the case but reply to the criticisms of the opposition. This the president has done in good temper and with citations from the record which are more convincing. That the letter will greatly strengthen the Republicans in the contest and supply texts for speakers in every section of the country is certain.

The president puts the silver question first, and with every right. Mr. Bryan, as he points out, is the representative of three parties, and the common bond uniting them is silver. The paramount issue, therefore, is this issue. The contest is between the gold standard and those who would overthrow it. The people, as in 1896, must choose between the two sides. The gold standard exists and was strengthened by the legislation of last spring, but, as the president says, its stability is secure only "so long as those who adhere to the Republican platform are kept in control of the government." Nothing could be plainer than this, because Mr. Bryan's expressed determination is to overthrow the gold standard if the power is committed to his hands.

As to the Philippines, the president leaves the opposition not a leg to stand on. Upon the question of our going to Manila he quotes the record, and continues to quote it with the same unanswerable effect along the whole line of procedure since. After arriving at Manila we were obliged to stay and to assert full authority. We were obliged then either to take over the archipelago or hand it back to Spain. We took it over with the assistance of Mr. Bryan himself. We made no promises of independence to Aguinaldo, and no terms short of independence were acceptable to him. He and his lieutenants have rejected all offers of good government and home rule. We were attacked by Aguinaldo and have only used force against force. Such is the record, and the president plants his standard upon it.

The president's thrust at what he characterizes as the "ill-concealed hypocrisy" of the Bryanites in their "anxiety to extend the constitutional guaranties to the people of the Philippines, while their nullification is openly advocated at home," is put in the following felicitously expressed paragraph:

"The Republican party does not have to assert its devotion to the Declaration of Independence. That immortal instrument of the fathers remained unexecuted until the people, under the lead of the Republican party, in the awful clash of battle, turned its promises into fulfillment. It wrote into the Constitution the amendments guaranteeing political equality to American citizenship, and it has never broken them or counseled others in breaking them. It will not be guided in its conduct by one set of principles at home and another set in the new territory belonging to the United States."

The president meets all the issues fairly and squarely. Sound money, protection and the courageous discharge of all the obligations courageously shouldered as the result of the war with Spain, find in him a firm champion. There is not the suggestion of scuttle anywhere in the whole document on any subject. He can afford to stand or fall with the situation as he presents it. Can the country afford to let him fall? Can it afford to rebuke him at the polls? Our domestic affairs under his guidance were never in better shape, and our foreign affairs difficult as they are, could not be mended, but would be certain of added embarrassments by the policy advocated by Mr. Bryan.

CHINESE HISTORY IN RHYME.

(Written for the Gazette.)

For the last forty years, I think, if Bonsall's words be true,
This history but the story is, of Tze-Hsi-Tuan-Yu.
Up to eighteen hundred sixty, a doubly wedded man
The "Empire of the Rising Sun" ruled, with wives Hsi and An.
But at this date occurred the death of Emperor Hien Fung,
When Tze-Hsi and Tze-An, assisted by Prince Kung
Caught up the reigns of government and, jointly as we see,
To their own satisfaction ruled till 1873.

Then Tung Che, son of Hien Fung, attained majority,
And so relieved these regents fair, of his minority.
But poor Tung Che, after two years, was helped by An and Hsi
"To ascend upon a dragon, and become a guest on high."
His heir unborn at time of death, the widow disappeared,
And the reign again reverted as all foresaw and feared
Unto the Empress Dowagers perpetual regents they—
Who spite of births, and life, and death, forever held their sway.

A council of the family was then convened, and sat
To choose another emperor, and "find where they were at."
By Tze-Hsi, and Tze-An, Kwang Su was then selected,
Altho' "dynastic prejudice" mildly, of course, objected.
"Of the same generation of Tung Che," was the thought,
And the "blessed continuity" is thereby set at naught."
But the Senior Empress Dowager! her ways were over bold,
So the bravest of her courtiers saw fit their tongues to hold,
And baby Kwang, but three years old, was Emperor proclaimed,
And Tze-Hsi and Tze-An the regency regained.
In this way Tuan's father, direct heir to the throne,
Was side-tracked by the Dowagers, who played the game alone.

And so the great Hsi ran it, until 1881,
When "her gentle colleague" Tze-An, died out of all the fun,
Leaving the Senior Dowager de jure in the end
As she had been de facto, while sharing with her friend.
That she was equal to the task, you may by this divine,
And strenuously she ruled the realm till 1889.
When young Kwang-Su, too, came of age, and showed himself not strong,
But the Empress caught, and safely towed the ship of state along.
His Edicts manfully she penned, while he left not in doubt
One hour the doubting public, when from the throne went out
Opinion, measure, order, advice, decree or bill,
That each did not embody the Empress-Mother's will.

And so she reigned as heretofore this woman born to rule
Until in 1898 she grew to fear her tool.
Reformer Kang-Yu-Wei had taught. Young China had been born.
Kwang-Su had sympathized which sin had doomed him to be shorn.
Besides, he'd dared to disappoint The Parent of an heir,
Upon the birth of whom, 'twas said, he would at once repair
To the ancestral realms of bliss, a worshipped one to be,
While Tze-Si would enter on another regency.

So like the general she is, equal to any fate,
The Imperial Seal she boldly seized in 1898,
And in the following year of grace, first month of '99,
She made this yellow "Son of Heaven" yield every "right divine."
With sacred pen, in his own hand, he issued the decree,
Making Pu Chun, son of Tuan, the heir of late Tung Che.

OPEN PARLIAMENT

Making the Comparison.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

Democratic politicians are endeavoring to convince their countrymen that the Philippine rebellion can be justified upon the same grounds as the American revolution of 1776. They ask fellow-citizens to believe that if Filipinos were wrong in attacking American forces at Manila, Americans were wrong in resisting the arbitrary aggressions of King George. Citizens who care to examine the facts in both cases will find that this conclusion of Democratic leaders is contrary to truth and is the result of exigencies of the present political campaign.

In 1776 the American colonies were peopled by a people nearly homogeneous, speaking the same language and having the same manners and customs. They had fought for the territory then in their possession and had bravely defended it against Spaniards, French and Indians. They were intelligent, industrious and humane. They possessed much political knowledge and were familiar with the various theories and forms of government. They had enjoyed for many years a large measure of home-rule and brought to the practical work of legislation the wisdom and experience of statemen. Their comprehensive knowledge of the principles upon which society is founded and their wonderful originality in devising our present system of government, welding 13 colonies into an enduring nation, have not yet ceased to excite the admiration of mankind. So eminent an authority as Mr. Gladstone declared the American constitution to be the most wonderful work ever struck off by the hand of man.

Most of the causes which justified Americans in severing their allegiance to the British crown are recited in the Declaration of Independence. Not one of the reasons can be applied to the American-Filipino situation. Among the causes set forth are the following:

"The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states.

"He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

"He has incited domestic insurrections among us."

Other causes are: "For cutting off trade with all parts of the world.

"For transporting us beyond the seas to be tried for pretended offenses.

"For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws and altering fundamentally the powers of our government.

"For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government."

But what has been the Philippine status? At the outbreak of Spanish-American hostilities, the archipelago was at peace with Spain. And no nation questioned Spanish supremacy in the islands. A recent insurrection of small proportions had collapsed, Aguinaldo and other leaders having been persuaded by pecuniary arguments to leave Luzon. The population is composed of numerous tribes, differing in language and racial peculiarities. Under the long Spanish domination there had been much improvement as compared with the earlier state of the inhabitants, but the system of government had been such that natives had little opportunity to acquire political knowledge or experience. American official reports are to the effect that Filipinos are incompetent to maintain a government capable of preserving domestic tranquility and of discharging international obligations.

While the Paris treaty was still under consideration in the senate, and before the United States had made a hostile move, certain ambitious individuals of the Tagal tribe incited their countrymen to insurrection. Before American authority had been put in operation throughout the islands, and while Americans were debating whether they would accept sovereignty, their troops were treacherously attacked and forced to defend themselves and the city of Manila. There had been no injustice nor oppression anywhere on the part of Americans. No Filipino legislature had been dissolved, and no right invaded. If Aguinaldo were to formulate his grievances, they would be something as follows:

(1) That Americans did not show sufficient respect for his whistle and gold collar, insignia of his authority.

(2) That he was not allowed to lodge in the palace of the Spanish governor general.

(3) That he was not permitted to sack the city of Manila and put to death all foreign residents.

(4) That he was not allowed to establish a dictatorship and tyrannize over the whole Philippine group of islands.

He could not allege that Americans had deprived the natives of commercial facilities, or business opportunities, or had disregarded any immunities theretofore enjoyed. He could not recite that ancient and vested rights had been trampled on—that political charters had been annulled, and free government suppressed.

Therefore, it is apparent that causes which led to the American revolution have nothing in common with those which developed the Philippine insurrection, and that Democrats are attempting to secure votes by falsifying facts and deceiving their fellow citizens.

Sea wall for Galveston.

Colorado Springs, Sept. 14.

Editor Gazette:

Probably your readers would be interested in reading something regarding Galveston Island, with particular reference to Galveston, from the pen of one who has studied the situation from a purely scientific standpoint.

I have been secretary of the Interstate Deep Harbor committee since its organization in 1887, the committee secured the $6,000,000 appropriation from the government for the building of the Galveston jetties, which improved the entrance to Galveston harbor from a depth of 12½ feet to 30 feet, ample depth to accommodate the largest ocean going vessels; as such secretary I have had unusual opportunities for becoming familiar with conditions in and about Galveston.

The island is low and composed alone of sand. The greatest width is about three miles; its greatest height above sea level within the city is eight feet, which occurs at the junction of Tremont street and Broadway, the latter the central street of the city extending lengthwise and the former is the main street which crosses the island from bay to gulf. The Tremont hotel is near this junction and apparently withstood the storm with little, if any damage, although there was some three or four feet of water on the first floor.

Several schemes will be proposed, undoubtedly, for averting another such disaster to the island city.

I notice that one of the prominent citizens of Galveston proposes to raise the surface of the city some 10 or 12 feet above its present level, that is an undertaking of such stupendous proportions that no engineer would recommend it. The city covers approximately six square miles and to fill that in, say 10 feet would require 60,000,000 cubic yards of dirt, every yard of which would have to be brought in by railroads from the mainland and would cost at least 25c per yard in place, or it would require $15,000,000 to fill and probably $5,000,000 more to raise the present buildings to the required level, a total of $20,000,000. July 4, 1882, there was a hurricane of modified proportions, yet of frightful aspect, and at that time I, as secretary of the chamber of commerce, suggested a sea wall for protection, but the chamber of commerce members felt quite secure and thought the effort to so secure the city not worthy of immediate consideration. The jetty walls run almost at right angles with the island and project into the sea about five miles. Parallel with the shore and about one mile out in the gulf is a sand bar upon which the water is only a few feet deep; my proposition was to begin at the south jetty wall and build just such a stone wall as composes the jetties, along that sand bar, so that the wall would be 12 to 15 feet above the water, and at a point below the city bring the wall into the island shore. The wall would be about [illegible] miles long and would cost about as much as one of the government jetties, viz: two or three million dollars; then I would build a wall across the island, to correspond with the sea wall, to the railroad tracks on the bay shore. Then raise the railroad tracks and wharves several feet, completely inclosing the city with a wall several feet above the tidal wave level of this great storm. The total cost would not exceed ($5,000,000) five million dollars. Abandon Galveston? No! a thousand times no; the importance of that point is beyond the comprehension of an inland resident, only those who have actual and continuous transactions with a seaport can have even a slight idea of the vast importance of Galveston to the middle west of these great United States. The sea wall would of course ruin the far-famed Galveston beach for bathing, but below the junction of the proposed wall with the island the bathing beach would become equally famous. In fact the great bath houses could be built within the wall with projections extending to the outside and become much more famous within a short period.

If Galveston is rebuilt and continues to grow as a port some such protection as that afforded by a great sea wall must be constructed; the exact location thereof and its magnitude would be a matter that should be determined by the government engineers. The work in so far as the sea portion is concerned, should be done by the government and by the proper course of a conservative lobby, such a bill could be passed by the coming congress. Galveston is stricken; Galveston belongs to the nation, and the harbor is the direct product of the nation; the harbor should be protected, to do which the city must be protected. The sea wall, in my judgment, is the cheapest and best protection. Miles and miles of such sea walls protect a portion of Holland from the encroachment of the North sea, which is, if anything, a more tempestuous sea than is the Gulf of Mexico. The Interstate Deep Harbor committee might be revived for the purpose of obtaining the national aid required in such a project and the accomplishment of the purpose made speedily. The committee is almost wholly intact and could be speedily assembled and prompt action taken.

Respectfully,

Frank L. Dana.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO LITERARY PEOPLE

Little, Brown and company will publish early in the fall a three-version edition of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," edited by Jessie B. Rittenhouse. It will give the translation of Fitzgerald, Whinfield and McCarthy.

Dodd, Mead & Co. announce a work on "The Chinese Problem," by Chester Holcombe, author of "The Real Chinaman." Mr. Holcombe was connected with the United States legation at Peking, China, as interpreter and secretary and in other capacities, from 1871 to 1885, and since that time he has been concerned with extensive commercial and financial questions in that country. In his new book he deals with the peculiar character and conditions of the Chinese which have produced the present uprising. These people are devoted to all sorts of secret societies for social, political, philanthropic and other purposes, and every uprising or disturbance in modern China has been brought about by such an organization. Mr. Holcombe thinks that the Chinese are quiet and orderly as a rule, yet given to perfect cyclones of unexplainable excitement, when they are wild with frenzy and know neither reason nor fear.

Ellen Glasgow, author of "The Voice of the People," is the subject of the monthly biography and portrait in the September Book News. There is an interesting article on St. Radegund, the celebrated poetess of the sixth century; an article on the work of the nuns in multiplying and preserving manuscripts during the middle ages, a sketch of Charles A. Berry, D. D., by Winifred Lee Wendell; and Dr. Talcott Williams talks on the more important new books, and furnishes a good guide as to what you should read on China. There are the usual reviews of other new books, reviews of the leading current magazines, a portrait and sketch of Frank L. Stanton, and a talk on the best selling books of the month. The Authors' Calendar is continued, and in the Great Writer series there is a sketch of Fitz-Greene Halleck, by William Cullen Bryant. Five cents a number, fifty cents a year. John Wanamaker, Philadelphia and New York.

In his book, "The Boers in War," which is to be published immediately by D. Appleton and company, Howard C. Hillegas, the author of "Oom Paul's People," gives an admirable character sketch of General Dewet, the Boer warrior who has for the fourth time managed to elude the British army columns sent to capture him. Mr. Hillegas spent several weeks with Dewet's commandos and had excellent opportunities for studying the man and his methods. In "The Boers in War" the author says that Dewet was a butcher and a farmer before the war, and that he once attempted to "corner" the potato market in Johannesburg. Dewet was one of the men who climbed Majuba hill and assisted in defeating the British in that memorable battle in 1881; but that was his only experience in warfare, the author says, before he began his wonderful career in this war. The book is illustrated with many excellent photographs taken by the author, but none is more interesting than that of General Dewet, who is represented in his "fighting clothes," which consist of the same suit he wore on his farm when he was called upon to lead his countrymen against the British forces.

Apropos of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, it is an interesting fact and one which speaks well for the great reading public of the United States, that there is in England (where the Rubaiyat first appeared) only one edition of this immortal poem; and that from the days when Fitzgerald first gave his incomparable translation thereof to a world unacquainted with the beauty of Persian letters, it has found small favor except in a select coterie formed of men and women whose finished education enabled them to perceive the merit and the charm of the poem. In this country, on the other hand, where education is universal, the Rubaiyat has gone through hundreds of editions. It has been reprinted from New York to San Francisco, and each edition has been gobbled up by the public ever alive to the best in literature. Few are the people who have not read it, and, when they do so they will be aware of what they might have missed. It is also a remarkable fact that the two illustrators of the Rubaiyat are both Americans, the one Elihu Vedder, the other Florence Lundborg, a California girl who has worked for years in Paris on William Doxey's new edition of this tremendous poem, announced as a fall publication.

Mr. William J. Lampton sends us the following quatrain, which we think best to insert here rather than in another part of the magazine:

TO JAMES LANE ALLEN.
The "Reign of Law"—
Well, Allen, you're lucky;
It's the first time it ever
Rained law in Kentucky.

It would be superfluous to tell any one who has ever read the New York Sun who Mr. Lampton is. Every good reader of that newspaper turns to the editorial page and hunts for the peculiar sort of verse in which Mr. Lampton serves up the striking topics of the day. If Mr. Bryan has said something more about sixteen to one; if New York has been struck by a blizzard or swept by a heat wave; if some Populist orator has been particularly vehement in his denunciation of the Octopus; if the young men from the Carlisle Indian Training School have founded a great rival nine on the foot-ball field; if a new sea serpent has been seen, or if it is the Fourth of July or Thanksgiving day or New Year's day; no matter what the subject may be, Mr. Lampton is there to earn, as he himself expresses it, his "bread by the sweat of his typewriter" and to dash off a squib that will place before the reader the whole situation with a vividness which could not be attained by four columns of heavy editorial. These squibs the author very felicitously designates as "Yawps." Many of them are soon to appear from the press of the Altemus company of Philadelphia in book form under the title "Yawps and Other Things"—"the other things being poems that are not yawps." To this very welcome volume Mr. Henry Watterson, the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, will write an introduction which will be explanatory in his own style of what a "Yawp" really is.

The September magazine number of the Outlook contains, beside the usual editorial, news and review departments, many special illustrated articles. "China: Portraits and Pictures Relating to the Present Crisis," has about a dozen pictures closely connected with the exciting recent events, including portraits of Count Von Waldersee, the German commander of the allied forces, and of other men prominent just at present. "The West's Golden Harvest," by John M. Harger, tells in a picturesque and interesting way, the story of the gathering of this year's phenomenal wheat harvest in the west, while many half-tone pictures, from photographs taken for that purpose, illustrate the story. The tenth part of Mr. Mabie's series of papers on Shakespeare, deals with the Histories and Comedies, and is copiously illustrated from old prints and other sources. Mr. James Barnes, the special correspondent of the Outlook in South Africa, contributes a well-illustrated article on "The British at Pretoria." "A Renegade" is a rather unusual story, by a writer of fiction who is just coming into prominence—Martha Wolfenstein; it deals with certain features of Jewish life. A Protestant Pastor in Rome, the Rev. Enrico Meynier, under the title, "Leo XIII, and the Next Pope," sketches the history of the pontificate of Leo, and describes the life and character of those cardinals who are most talked of as likely to be his successor; about a dozen portraits of the cardinals are included. $3.00 a year. The Outlook Company, New York.)

The Century company is about to publish a new series of the world's best books, to be called "The Century Classics," selected, edited and introduced by distinguished men of letters. The publishers have had in view beauty of external form and elegance of typography combined with high standing and intrinsic merit of the works to be reprinted and purity of the text. The books are printed from a new cut of type, which will be used only in these volumes and on pure rag paper, made especially for the series, which bears the water mark "Century Classics." Each one will have as a frontispiece the portrait of the author which is generally accepted as the best likeness, and this will be copied photographically, preserving in each case the characteristics of the original. It is believed that this series will appeal to every lover of beautiful books. In response to a popular demand for well-made standard books at a low price, "The Century Classics" will be sold at $1 per volume, net. The first six, to be issued in October, are as follows: "Bacon's Essays," with an introduction by Professor George E. Woodberry; Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," with an introduction by Bishop Henry C. Potter; Defoe's "Plague in London," with an introduction by Sir Walter Besant; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," with an introduction by Henry James; selections from the Poems of Robert Herrick, with a biographical sketch and critical study by T. B. Aldrich; and Kinglake's "Eothen," introduced by the Hon. James Bryce, M. P.

Extremes.

A little girl not long ago,
When the ground was chill and white with snow,
Put on!
A tam-o'-shanter on her head,
A muff, and a pair of mittens red,
A muffler round her chin and throat,
And down to her toes a big, long coat;
For the snow blew here and the snow blew there,
And into her face and into her hair;
But the little girl beneath the cap,
And the muffler, mittens, muff and wrap,
Said: "I dress like this in a big snow storm
For when it is cold I want to be warm!"

But now
This same little girl on a summer day,
When the flowers bloom and the fields are gay,
Puts on:
A short white dress with little blue bows,
With her fair pink cheeks like the fair pink rose;
And her curls are tucked on her head with care;
And her dimpled arms and her neck are bare;
And the daisies nod in her daisy chin;
And the roses droop for the want of rain;
But this little girl with the ribbon bows,
And twinkling eyes where the laughter grows,
Says: "I dress like this, and a fan I hold,
For when it is warm I want to be cold!"

A Lover's Exit.

Sir Walter Besant tells much that is interesting in the September Century of that East London hamlet which bears the name of Ratcliffe.

The house beside the church is now the vicarage. It is a square, solid house, built about the end of the seventeenth century. It is remarkable for a dining-room the walls of which are painted with Italian landscapes. The story is that there lived here early in the eighteenth century a merchant who rode into London every day, leaving his only daughter behind. He desired to decorate his house with wall-paintings, and engaged a young Italian to stay in the house and to paint all day. Presently he made a not unusual discovery, that the Italian and his daughter had fallen in love with each other. He knew that was due to his position as a city merchant, and, as might have been expected, he rose with dignity to the occasion. That is to say that he ordered the young man to get out of the house within half an hour. The young man obeyed, so far as to mount the stairs to his own room. Here, however, he stopped, and when the angry parent climbed the stairs after the expiration of the half-hour to know why he was not gone, he found the young lover dead, hanging to the canopy of the bed. His ghost was long believed to haunt the house and was only finally laid after troops of servants had fled shrieking, when the wife of the vicar sat up all night by herself in the haunted chamber, and testified that she had neither seen nor heard anything, and was quite willing to sleep in the room. That disgusted the ghost, who then went away of his own accord. I wish I could show you one room in the house. It was the old "powdering-room." When your wig had been properly curled and combed, you threw a towel or dressing-gown over your shoulders, and sat in this little room, with your back to the door. Now, the door had a sliding panel, and the barber on the other side was provided with the instrument which blew the white powder through the panel upon the wig. The operation finished, you arose, slipped off the dressing gown, and descended to your coach with all the dignity of a gold-laced hat, a wig as white as the driven snow, lace ruffles, a lace tie, and a black velvet coat—if you were a merchant—with gold buttons and white silk stockings. A beautiful time it was for those who could afford the dignity and the splendor which made it beautiful. For those who could not—humph! not quite so beautiful a time.

The Negro is a Novelty in Parts of Virginia.

Once we stopped at a cabin, and Sam, the black cook, went in for a drink of water. A little girl saw him and was thrown almost into convulsions of terror. She had never seen a negro before. Her mother had told her, doubtless, that the bad man would get her some day and she thought Sam was the devil and that he had come for her. And this in Virginia. I knew there were many white people in Virginia, and all throughout the Cumberland, who had never seen a black man, and why they hate him as they do has always been a mystery, especially as they often grant him social equality, even to the point of eating at the same table with him, though the mountaineer who establishes certain relations with the race that is still tolerated in the South, brings himself into lasting disgrace. Perhaps the hostility reaches back to the time when the poor white saw him a fatal enemy, as a slave, to the white man who must work with his hands. And yet, to say that this competition with the black man, along with a hatred of his aristocratic master, was the reason for the universal Union sentiment of the southern mountaineer during the war is absurd. Competition ceased nearly a century ago. Negro and aristocrat were forgotten—were long unknown. No historian seems to have guessed that the mountaineer was loyal—because of 1776. The fight for the old flag in 1812 and the Mexican war helped, but 1776 was enough to keep him loyal to this day; for today, in life, character, customs, speech and conviction, he is practically what he was then.—(From "To the Breaks of Sandy," by John Fox, Jr., in the September Scribner's.

ON THE BOOKS FOR THE WEEK

Next Saturday the children will hold high carn'val at the Opera house while the big folks will enjoy themselves Just [illegible] Manager Nye has secured the Davis Juvenile company for that day In the afternoon the children will have a matinee when the price of admission will be 25 cents for them and 50 cents for the older ones In the evening the performance will be for the older people and the prices will run from 1 00 down to 50 cents

The Davis children were here during the summer and made a big hit at the casino although they were seen under unfavorable circumstances They have since organized a troup of players which include children who do acts in other lines It is said to be one of the cutest shows for [illegible] even been started on the road. Everybody remembers little Madaline, Horace and Joe with their singing and dancing and cakewalking This time there will be no mistake about their costumes arriving and they will be seen in all their glory. They have many new songs and a new act that Joe Newman taught them

Frank Daniels popularity in Chicago was pretty well demonstrated last week when the labor unions striking on the Grand Opera house waived their differences on learning that Frank Daniels expected to open his Chicago season there the next week in "The Ameer," and all went to work determined, they said, that "the funny little fellow should find everything in readiness for him on his arrival."

"Arizona," Gus Thomas's great American play, had its initial New York opening last Monday night and scored an immediate hit. Already the management of the theater is negotiating with Managers La Shelle and Hamlin to induce them to prolong the engagement beyond the stipulated fifteen weeks.

Margaret Sylva, the brilliant young footlight favorite of New York, who is to star this season in "The Princess Chic," spent last week in the photograph gallery and had her picture taken in 283 styles and costumes.

The announcement is made that the well known and well liked comedian, Eddie Foy, is to appear at the Opera house soon, in a new, brilliant comedy entitled "A Night in Town" The play is an adaptation of an Italian comedy and it is said to be one of the brightest pieces that has been presented in the line of farce for several years. Foy has an excellent part and those who remember his unctuous and spontaneous humor can readily understand what a good laugh is in store for them during his coming engagement. He will be supported by an excellent company including Miss Eva Tanguay, Charles French and numerous other well known artists.

The most marvelous act or illusion ever presented on any stage and the sensation of both hemispheres is Hermann the Great's latest offering "Cremation." A beautiful woman is set on fire and slowly burns to ashes before your very eyes Ask not how it is done, but go and see it at the Opera house when Hermann comes.

A theatrical company in which Colorado Springs has a large interest is now touring the states along the great lakes It is the Slayton New York Dramatic company. They began their tour at one of the towns in Illinois the latter part of August. The company is backed by the Slaton Lyceum of Chicago and is playing Shakespearean comedies and Hamlet. At the head of the company is John Arthur, known here as J Arthur Loining The leading lady is Effie Elaine Hext formerly of this city and prominent in the cast is Mr. Otto Jeancon, well known in local theatricals The company has a long tour mapped out and is meeting with considerable success

'One of the best titles ever given to a farce comedy is 'Brown's in Town" which will be the attraction at the Opera house next Wednesday There is something amusing in the very suggestion as to why this numerous gentleman is in the city. It is said that this particular Brown has had enough embarrassing experiences to shake up an audience thoroughly The amusing situations in the farce are said to never pall on any one, and those who have seen it pronounce the most original of all of them The conventional mother-in-law, the stereotyped old maid the visiting aunt with mother-in-law instincts, and the time worn German and Irish servants have been dispensed with The story of 'Brown's in Town' is told by young players, which is a novel feature in itself, and in farce cannot help to be entertaining when illustrated by such a clever collection of comedians as seen in this one The management is confident that 'Brown's in Town' will not be compared to any of the latter day farces as the story is an entirely new and original one Several musical numbers are introduced [illegible] are said to fit in admirably. The farce is in three acts all of which takes place on a summer's day, and the plot hinges on the story of a young man who is secretly married against the wishes of a stern father, whose matrimonial troubles give him good reasons for asking his son to remain a bachelor. Take it all in all, the complications [illegible] arise in trying to keep his wedded life a secret, makes the liveliest day young Brown, his friends and relatives ever experienced.

WITH THE PLAY AND PLAYERS GENERALLY

William A Brady's production of "Way Down East," which is to be seen here next March, is jamming McVicker's theatre in Chicago to the roof every night. The play has proved to be one of the phenomenal successes of the year. It is presented with such spectacular beauty and such a wealth of detail that it almost staggers belief in the bounds of art.

The two companies presenting "The Christian" are pursuing prosperous tours through the New New England and Middle states respectively, and proving beyond doubt that, in spite of its two phenomenal seasons, the popularity of Hall Caine's great play has not waned Both organizations have received the highest critical commendation, proving that it pays to send out good casts.

George C. Boniface, Jr in Broadhurst Bros. production of "The Man From Mexico" opens his season at Wilmington, Del. on September 10 The company includes Gus Bixley, M L Heckert, F. W. Bernard, Robert Deshon, Arthur Villars, J. Tron Gray, D. H Landon, D. W. Siegrist, Helen Baird Agnes Burke, Adeline Mann and Mildred Keith

Sarah Cowell LeMoyne will begin her second starring tour in "The Greatest Thing in the World" at Wilmington, Del., on Sept 24, playing two weeks of return engagements over the same territory where she scored such a success last spring, before coming to Wallack's theatre for her first similar appearance in New York on October 8. Among the new members of Mrs LeMoyne's company will be Wilton Lackaye, John Glendinning, Florence Rockwell, Adelaide Thurston and Mrs. Glendinning—Robert Edeson, Walter Thomas, Charles Stanley and Edwin James being retained in the same roles they played last season

Della Fox is herself again. She has made a hit as Belle Money in "The Rogers Brothers in Central Park" in Philadelphia, and her appearance in this farce at the Victoria theatre in New York, Sept. 17, will attract not a little attention. She has completely recovered her health and plays with all her old-time vivacity. In "Three Sailors," a specialty with the Rogers Brothers in the second act, and as the cabby in a musical specialty in the last act, "If Cabby Told Half That He Knows," she displays in its fullest measure the artistic ability which won for her a national reputation as an entertainer

Mary Mannering began rehearsals of "Janice Meredith" last Monday. The principals of her support are Robert Droust as Charles Fownes, the bondman, afterwards Col. John Brereton of Gen Washington's staff; Burr McIntosh as Philemon Hennion, A. S. Lipman as Lord Clowes, George Backus as Lieut. Mobray; Carl Ahrendt as Col Rahl Charles M Collins as 'Squire' Meredith, John D O'Hara as Sergt. Willis, Aubrey Beattie as Joe Bagby; Martin J Cody as 'Squire Hennion, Louise Rial as Mrs Meredith, Amy Ricard as Tabutha Drinker and Vivian Bernard as 'Sukey.'

Edward E Ross the dramatist of 'Janice Meredith,' never attended a horse race till Frank McKee took him to Sheepshead Bay to see 'Ballyhoo Bey' win the 'Futurity' He became so excited when the horses came into the stretch that he tried to climb the fence and get on to the track He now thinks horse racing the real thing

R D MacLean and Odette Tyler who will be featured the coming season with Modjeska, are in New York to place a large order with Hermann the costumer, who is to make their entire wardrobe for the varied repertoire in which they are to appear Mr MacLean will play the title role in King John to Modjeska's Constance, and Miss Tyler will of course be the Prince Arthur. MacLean will also be seen as Macbeth, Leicester in Marie Stuart, Orlando in As You Like It, Armand in Camille, etc

Mrs. Annie Yeamans has got what she wanted but does not know whether she likes it or not When Mr George H Broadhurst projected 'The House That Jack Built' Mrs Yeamans requested that he write her a part in which she could play a woman with money Mr Broadhurst complied with the request and made Mrs Dooley the character which he has given to Mrs Yeamans, a woman without a husband but with plenty of wealth Now Mrs Yeamans finds that instead of buying a calico dress at the total cost of two dollars and sixty-five cents which has been all the wardrobe that her parts have called for in the last ten or twelve years she will have to provide herself with three extremely handsome gowns and that instead of calmly resting between the acts she will have to employ her time changing from one dress to the other And that is the reason that she does not know whether to be satisfied after getting what she really wanted.

When the Broadhurst Bros first produced 'What Happened to Jones' they termed it a 'hilarious sufficiency' Now it is termed Broadhurst's Globe-Circling American Comedy because it has been successfully produced in the following cities of the world on the dates mentioned

New York City, August 30 1897.
Philadelphia, November 25, 1897.
New Orleans, January 2 1898.
Chicago, February 27, 1898
Boston, March 21, 1898.
Montreal April 18 1898
San Francisco, September 19, 1898.
London, Eng, July 7, 1898.
Dublin, Ireland, May 8, 1899
Liverpool Eng December 18, 1899.
Pretoria, September 20 1899

"Why Smith Left Home" will open the season in Providence September 3, most of last season's company having been retained including Douglas Flint Eugene Redding, Frank Craven, Gus Mortimer, Frederick Roberts, Rose Hubbard, Lizzie May Ulmer, Nellie Haskell Eleanor LaSalle Bessie Bruno, Jennie Engel, and Ella Aubry. Lottie Williams-Salter, who gained quite a reputation last season through the fact that she played every female role in Broadhurst's 'Why Smith Left Home' has refused through her agent, Jennie Jacobs an offer to create the part of "Innocent Kidd" in the forthcoming London production of "A Parlor Match" as she is under contract to appear in a big New York production early in November.

Frank Daniels began his season last Monday night at Manhattan Beach, presenting his comic opera success of last season, "The Ameer." He was supported by Helen Redmond, and the rest of the cast which assisted him last season. He will appear before long with the same company including his large New York chorus.

"Brown's in Town," is one of the early attractions coming this season, being booked for the 19th. The company is a large and capable one, including Miss Jessie Mae Hall Maude Knowlton, Fanny Midgely, Edyth Wells Chas Horn, Geo. Welch, Emmett Whitney, Geo. Ebner, Mannie Ward and others.

In the great revival of Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream which Wagenhals and Kemper have prepared for their stars, Mr. Louis James and Miss Kathryn Kidder, and their great company of forty-one people, booked here for January 7th there will be a wonderful combination of dramatic interest, low comedy diversion, fairy revels, music, dancing and spectacle, every feature of which has been met by the vast preparations that have been made this summer. The great scenic feature of the play will be the representation of dawn at the close of the fourth act. This will be accomplished by an elaborate system of transparencies, electrical color-lights, gorgeous calciums and moving panoramas The scene is the fairy wood near Athens and the transformation will pass from the moon-lit wild-wood, with its mysterious shadows, to the full burst of morning, making, it is said, the most realistic and beautiful transformation ever seen on the American stage.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE MINSTREL SHOW

Minstrelsy, that unique and supreme exponent of darky Americanism, and the only distinctive American amusement on the stage today, is barely fifty years old In that half century, however, it has seen most remarkable changes and improvements and grown and expanded in popularity, year by year, until today it holds first place in the hearts of the American theater-going public.

Much has been said and written on the birth of minstrelsy and there have been conflicting statements regarding it, but as nearly as can be traced, it had its origin in 1842, the four originators being Dan Emmet, the author of "Dixie;" Dick Pelham, Billy Whitlock and Frank Brower. They performed on the violin, banjo, tambourine and bones. Of the quartet, Emmet is by far the best known to the general public of today. If he had never done anything but write "Dixie" his deathless fame would be assured He wrote the now beloved and world-famous lines in 1859 as a "walk around" for Bryant's minstrels and had no idea they would be taken up as the war song of the South. "Dixie" was first published in the New York Clipper of January 26, 1861 Here are the original lines

I wish I was in de land of cotton,
Old times dar am not forgotten,
Look away, look away,
Look away Dixie land
In Dixie land where I was born in,
Early on one frosty mornin',
Look away, look away,
Look away, Dixie land.

Chorus
Den I wish I was in Dixie,
Hooray, hooray
In Dixie land
I'll take my stand
To live and die in Dixie,
Away, away, away down South in Dixie.
Away, away, away down South in Dixie.

Nearly everybody has heard of 'Daddy' Rice. His real name was Thomas D Rice, and though he had nothing to do with minstrelsy as we understand it, he was a singer of negro songs and the best known of them all. Rice mimicked an old darkey he saw in a Louisville (Ky.) stable. The darkey's name was Jim Crow, and Rice composed a song by that name which made him famous It ran something like this:

Wheel about, I turn about,
I do jess so,
An' every time I wheel about,
I jump Jim Crow.

Joseph Jefferson made his first appearance on the stage in Washington in this connection He was carried on the stage in a bag by Rice, and dumped out made up in an exact counterpart of Rice As soon as the boy was out of the bag he began to sing and dance "Jim Crow," Rice having sung as a prelude:

Ladies and gemman,
I'll hab you for to know;
I've got a little darkey here,
To jump Jim Crow.

This was in 1833. Ten years before that Edwin Forrest appeared in cork in a farce called 'The Tailor in Distress," in Cincinnati, and in 1850 Edwin Booth gave minstrel performances in Belair, Md., and the ignorant negro bill poster posted the bills upside down. Minstrel companies became numerous in the 50's, one of the best known of them being Buckley's New Orleans Serenaders, who were the first to introduce burlesque operas in black face

The real originator of negro minstrelsy, however, was Edwin P. Christy. He organized his company at Buffalo, N Y, in 1844, and traveled mostly through the south Besides Christy there were his two sons, William and Byron. He also had an adopted son, George N. Christy, whose real name was George N. Harrington, whom Christy picked up in New York, where he was dancing on street corners for the amusement of his companions The elder Christy popularized many of the songs written by Stephen C. Foster, such as "Nelly Bly," "Nellie Was a Lady," "Oh, Susanna," "Way Down on the Suwanee Ribber," ("Old Folks at Home"), "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "Old Dog Tray," "Old Uncle Ned," "Old Kentucky Home," "Willie, We Have Missed You," "Old Black Joe," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," and "Hard Times Come Again No More."

The war made an epoch in minstrelsy. In 1861 George Christy's minstrels which had succeeded those of his father, were at Charleston, S. C., and, being northern born, found themselves in a ticklish position. The band, however, played Dixie, and John P. Smith used his Virginia eloquence to assure the South Carolinians that the minstrels were neutral. Smith, who was the business agent of the company, was a fire eater, and his southern proclivities gave the company a safe passport but for a long time George Christy's minstrels were under the ban in the north on account of that enforced serenade in Charleston Duprez & Green's minstrels were in New Orleans when the war broke out and had a hard time getting north Strange to say, it was the last company to leave the south in 1861, and the first to re-enter it after peace had been declared Skiff and Gaylord's minstrels were the next to visit the south

Of the other early minstrel companies mention should be made of Wood's, Campbell's and Newcomb and Arlington's. William H. Arlington of the latter was the first man to do a double tambourine act on the end. Then there were the Morris Brothers one of whom used to sing "The Mocking Bird," which was just coming into popularity. They came from Boston, and P S Gilmore was with them He was Pat Gilmore in those days, and just a plain, everyday cornet player Theodore Thomas was a 'nigger singer,' as Mrs E P. Christy used to call them, and so was Tony Pastor. Matt Peel was a popular end man with Campbell's minstrels He was tall and thin, lean and lantern-jawed, but he didn't depend on his shape to make fun, though, of course, it helped him immensely. Then there were the Bryants, Dan, Neil and Jerry, and Skiff and Gaylord's minstrels who were put on the road by John Steele, better known as "Coal Oil Johnny." They were the first to put on a first part in white face and white wigs, the Albino minstrels they called themselves, and it didn't go at all in those days The succeeding companies including those of Birch Wombold and Backus, Duprez and Benedict, Jack Haverly Barlow, Wilson, Primrose and West, the Al G. Field minstrels and many others are familiar to the public today.

Many leading lights of the stage began their careers as minstrels Amongst the few we can call to mind were: Florence, the eminent comedian as well as his brother-in-law, Barney Williams, [illegible] the elder who was the most popular German dialect comedian of his time, was a minstrel, J. E. Murphy, the Irish comedian, was a bone player and end man with minstrel shows for many years Andrew Mack and Chauncey Olcott were both ballad singers with minstrel shows Henry E Dixey and his partner Richard Golden were minstrels. Francis Wilson, the comic opera star, was of the popular firm of Mackin and Wilson, song and dance artists who traveled with all the minstrel shows in their time Many others could be mentioned. Dan Emmett, who is living in retirement in Mt Vernon, O., is credited with the origination of the minstrel first part, that is seating the members of the company in a semi-circle and rendering a musical programme. This was in the fall of 1849 For many years afterward Emmett was the musical director of Bryant's minstrels. In '95-96 Mr. Emmett made a farewell tour of the country as a member of the Al G. Field minstrels When the company appeared in New York city, a professional matinee was given and Emmett, with the aid of three other old-time minstrels, put on an imitation of the first minstrel first part, singing the same songs that the four original minstrels sang This scene was introduced at a professional matinee and was enthusiastically received Dan Emmett, the founder of minstrelsy, is held in high esteem by all minstrel people. Al G. Field is a firm friend of the old minstrel and frequently visits him to see that the old man is comfortable Mr Field is proud of the fact that the founder of the line of amusements that has brought him success made his last professional appearance with his company from one end of the country to the other. Emmett received an ovation, and the author of "Dixie" was as well known in the north as in the south. The appearance in the first part of Emmett when "Dixie" was sung, was always the occasion of prolonged applause. (Ex

People who eat at restaurants sometimes see things that are in some degree amusing The other night I was at Tucker's and there was another fellow with me I have to eat late at night and the other fellow didn't, so he was not very hungry. He did call the waiter, however and order a piece of pie. While I disposed of my midnight lunch he ate the pie and drank water.

When we started to leave the waiter touched me on the shoulder and said

'Say, who is your friend?'

'Why, he's a good fellow' said I

'Well, I think he's a good thing,' said the waiter. 'He rang the call bell four times, drank three glasses of water and ate a piece of pie Check 5 cents'

And I didn't know but the waiter was right about it.

A little Colorado Springs boy, 4 years old, was sleeping a few days ago in the same room with the senior member of the household Shortly after 5 o'clock in the morning the little boy awoke and began to talk The older gentleman endeavoring to quiet him said

"Charlie, don't talk so loud You will wake the rest of the people"

The older gentleman then proceeded to go to sleep, and in a few moments was snoring beautifully

"Grandpa" said Charlie, "Don't sleep so loud You'll wake the rest of the people."

"That's a good weigh to make a living' remarked a man yesterday as he passed by the business stand of the professional weight guesser.

Two young men well known in certain circles in Colorado Springs went into a clothing store a couple of weeks ago One of them wanted to buy a shirt. He selected one that he liked and paid for it $1 50 That night the two young men went to the opera house and saw Mathews and Bulger in "The Night of the Fourth" One of the hits in the play was Bulger's remark upon each of the several occasions when a question arose as to his identity, "Read the name on my shirt,' whereupon the person who desired to know his name looked at the lower part of the shirt bosom and read 'Eli Frost'

The next day the two young men referred to were together The one who had bought a new shirt had it on The two became involved in a discussion and the one who had not bought a shirt said to the other Well, who are you anyway?'

"Read the name on my shirt," replied the other

The bluff was taken The other looked at the customary place and read, not 'Eli Frost' but just '59 [illegible]

'Well, you're the easiest mark I ever saw,' said the inquirer, "to go and pay $1 50 for a 59-cent shirt"

The other went home and put on a vest

A man who washes himself delicately with hand-woven wash-rags embroidered with his monogram and pranked about with laces and baby ribbon complained savagely in an eastern paper the other day that wash-rags being usually such beautiful and expensive things should be given a more poetical and fitting name. Since then nine correspondents have stepped forward with suggestions The best of these comes from one who dates his letter at Chester and signs it Hayseed. After reading the item about 'wash-rags,' "Hayseed says, 'I thought I would suggest the name [illegible] for the article It is short, appropriate, original, and I think, sounds a little better than wash-rag' If you approve of it push it along, for it may turn out a good thing'

Whenever there has been a horse show in Denver, one of the young business men of this city has always received an invitation coupled with an entry blank. The young man in question is not a fancier of horses nor has he ever been prominent in horse show affairs or racing and he has often wondered why he should have been picked out above the other men of his office for an invitation Recently he received an invitation to the horse show which is soon to be held in Denver and this time there was no entry blank with it But in the next mail he received the customary document and as he opened it he turned to one of his associates, and said 'Say am I the biggest donkey in our business in town?' His friend said he thought there might be at least one or two others over whom he had the advantage and asked him why he asked His reply was "Well I have always received an entry blank for Denver horse shows and as I never owned a horse I was wondering if they meant to insinuate that I was the greatest jackass they knew in Colorado Springs and wanted me to enter myself' His friend told him that he guessed it was a horse on him, and he treated

A friend of mine a few weeks ago found on the street a greyhound The dog was terribly thin and skinny in appearance his sides bearing considerable resemblance to the sides of a ship before the hull is inclosed But he was a pleasant dog, as was manifested in a propensity that he had for revealing his front teeth in a sort of happy smile when he noted the approach of a stranger. My friend became attached to the canine and endeavored to teach him to frolic For days my friend ran up and down the street in front of his home calling the dog but not until two or three days ago had he succeeded in feeding and caressing his pet up to the point where he would join in the fun

Two or three days ago the dog having become filled out to the extent that a person need not be ashamed to be seen on the street in his company, my friend decided that he would take him to the store and get some meat. The dog trotted along congenially to the store and was left outside while his foster master went in to get some meat. Procuring a couple of pounds of "dog" meat my friend went out, but there was no dog to be seen The canine had taken his departure and to date has not been heard from My friend is still holding the dog meat, but is beginning to think that man's ingratitude is exceeded only by that of some dogs

DEAL FOR TWO AND HALF MILLS OF PLACER

J. H. Reiling of Chicago is the Purchaser--Means an Investment of $150,000--Ground is Very Rich--Will Be Worked by Dredges.

A deal for a very large tract of placer territory in the Maxwell land grant, Colfax county, New Mexico, has just been closed up.

The purchaser of the property is Mr. H. J. Reiling, brother-in-law of Messrs. Tom and Phil. Delany of this city. Mr. Reiling lives in Chicago, but has been visiting here this summer.

The property is along the Moreno river and covers an area of two and one half miles long by from 500 to 1,000 feet wide. Spot cash was paid for it, and by the time operations are fully under way an expenditure of $150,000 will have been made.

It is estimated that this placer ground contains 10,000,000 cubic yards of workable and highly profitable gravel. The pay dirt is from 18 to 20 feet deep. This will be worked over by dredges, two of which will be put on the ground, and each of which will handle 3,500 cubic yards of dirt in every 24 hours. The dredge is known as the Bucyrus make and is undoubtedly by far the most successful of the few kinds that are made in this country. The dredges are built after designs made by Mr. Reiling and are something of the same style as those operated in New Zealand.

Before completing the purchase of the property Mr. Reiling made, of course, a very thorough test of the ground. In all 27 test pits were put down to bed rock and the large samples taken from these showed values of from 30 cents to $5.10 per cubic yard. Thirty cents per cubic yard was the lowest return obtained, while over 40 cents, excluding the highest one, was the average obtained. Figuring on the lowest, however, Mr. Reiling considers this by far the richest ground he has ever secured and expects to take millions of dollars' worth of gold from it.

The dredges of Mr. Reiling's design are enormous structures. The machinery on them weighs about 500,000 pounds and the boats complete weigh nearly 1,000,000 pounds. They have a maximum capacity of 5,000 cubic yards of dirt per day, but not above than 3,500 is figured upon as an average. They are run by four men. The boats have already been ordered, and the lumber will be on the ground early next summer for their construction and completion. The boats and machinery take about five months to build, and it is thought that operations will be in full swing by June next, when the daily production of gold from the ground promises to be something wonderful.

Mr. Reiling has had a great deal of experience in gold dredging and has made a big financial success of the business. He is now conducting some extensive dredging operations in other points of the west and these are making large annual profits for those interested.

A description of the dredge was printed in Mines and Minerals some time ago. It is both instructive and interesting, and is as follows:

"These boats are built about 100 feet long and 35 feet wide, the frame work is of heavy timbers, closely braced, and they carry over 200 tons of boilers, engines and other machinery. Before launching such a dredge, a dam is built across the gulch so that sufficient water is impounded to float it. When operations commence the gravel, when washed, is deposited behind the dredge which moves up the stream in the excavation thus made. Steam is generated by two tubular boilers, each of 125 horse-power, of the locomotive type, with grates arranged to use pine and fir wood for fuel. Immediately in front of the boiler is placed a set of engines which drive the buckets, raise and lower the bucket ladder or frame, and run the guy lines which are attached at the front of the dredge and which are anchored outside, so that the dredge can be swung in a circle on the spuds or pile timbers at the rear end of the boat, which thus act as an anchored pivot. These engines are under the control of an engineer stationed in a pilot house above the upper deck, from which points he sees all operations and handles the machinery levers connecting with the engines.

"Directly in front of and below the engineer is the ladder on which works an endless chain or 36 buckets for digging. The lower end of the ladder is vertically adjustable for depth by means of suspensory cables passed over a frame above and wound upon a drum at the engine and under the control of the engineer in the pilot house. This ladder permits the buckets to excavate gravel at a depth of 38 feet, the buckets being driven by a sprocket chain gear connected with a 75-horse-power engine. The bucket chain swings loose on the under side so that each bucket has a horizontal drag of eight feet through the gravel and its loading is accomplished as it passes over a pulley at the upper end. The lower one, however, is provided with six faces, to fit the massive links of the bucket chain and is flanged to prevent lateral motion or slipping off of the chain while working.

"The loaded buckets pass under the ladderway, which is fitted with steel rollers at short intervals for carrying the load, and empty into a hopper when traveling over the upper pulley. These buckets and links are made of annealed Bessemer steel, with the rim and other parts exposed to wear, riveted on, so that renewal of them can be made from time to time. The buckets have a capacity of five cubic feet. By means of the suspensory cables handling the bucket ladder, this ladder is lowered about six inches with each swing of the dredge around the anchored spud; thus, with the drag of the buckets a segment of gravel six inches deep and eight feet wide is excavated. This lowering of the ladder continues until bedrock is reached, which, if yielding, is cut loose and brought up until barren of values.

"Strong jets of water are introduced into the hopper into which the gravel has been dumped. The mixed gravel and water feed themselves by gravity into a revolving screen or trommel, where additional water is introduced. This trommel is 12 feet long, 48 inches in diameter, is inclined three inches to the foot, and the perforations are one and one-half inches in size. Thus, the large rocks are separated from the gravel and sand, and passed out at the lower end of the trommel into the water on the side of the boat. The finer material drops into a second hopper, where additional water is introduced by a powerful pump and the gold finally recovered in metallic sluices extending over the end of the boat suspended from a frame. The sluices are fitted with convenient riffle boards, which are very easy to clean up and save a very high percentage of all the gold contained in the gravel.

TO BUY ELKTON PROPERTIES

An Offer is Said to Have Been Made to This Intent, and an Important Directors Meeting This Week May Consider It.

From the various sources of information open to the Gazette it is gathered that there is a possibility of the Elkton properties being sold to a syndicate of capitalists who are extremely anxious of securing this valuable Raven hill mine. Although no definite price has been spoken of, it is understood that the properties, if sold, will go for a price so large that there can be no reasonable cause for complaint upon the part of any stockholder in the company.

It will be easily understood by every one that if there be a deal pending for the sale of a rich mine, involving as much as a sale of the Elkton would imply, the officers of the company, or those in any way connected with the affair, could not give out any information before the matter had been definitely settled one way or the other. And so while the officers of the company received a representative of the Gazette very courteously, they said that in regard to any deal for the sale of the Elkton properties, they had nothing to say.

It was learned, however, that there will be an important meeting of the directors of the company held early in the week, and it is suggested from outside sources that this meeting will have to do with a proposition which has been made to the company. Indeed, it is understood that there has been more than one offer made, although some of them were merely tentative.

Mr. George Bernard, the president of the company, said that he knew there had been various stock deals proposed to holders but was not communicative when it came to speaking of a deal for the sale of the properties. He said that yesterday morning one of the largest stockholders in the company was approached by a person who wanted to take an option for two or three months on his entire holdings, at $2.50 a share, and was willing to pay at once for the option; but the stockholder refused to consider an option at less than $4.00 a share, which price he expects to be able to get for his stock by holding it. Another large shareholder, Mr. Bernard said, would not consider an option at even $4.

"Personally," vouchsafed the president of the company, in regard to the rumored sale of the properties, "I do not wish to consider it, at any price. I am satisfied to hold on. But if the other directors and a reasonable number of the stockholders wanted to ratify a sale, of a good offer were made, I should not stand in their way."

BONZAI STOCK NOW LISTED

The stock of the Bonzai Gold Mining company was called for the first time on the Colorado Springs Mining Stock exchange yesterday morning, when 5,000 shares sold at 5¼ cents. The stock has just been regularly accepted by the listing committee as a prospect.

The company is capitalized at 1,500,000 shares, with 300,000 shares and $5,000 cash in the treasury. Its officers are: President, Albert Wagner, vice president, H. H. Dorsey; secretary, H. A. Pettit; assistant secretary, A. L. Houck, and treasurer, E. P. Arthur. It is a recent flotation, its birthday having been on the 9th of July last.

The properties owned by the company comprise nearly 36 acres on Squaw mountain, 10 claims in all, only three of which are not yet patented, and the company has no adverses or other litigation pending.

A considerable amount of development work has been done on the several claims, and some is in progress at present. The deepest shaft is one 60 feet deep, while there are several between 15 and 60, while a tunnel is in for a distance of 65 feet. It will be seen that no extensive development work has been done so far, and that before any of the bonanza ore for which Squaw mountain has recently become famous and which probably inspired the organization of this company can be reached a considerable amount of work will be necessary. The company, however, does not intend to be backward about that, and already it has started work on its own account on one of its claims, and three applications for lease have been made, and will be granted.

THE CONDITION OF ACACIA

The Wrockloff Lease O. K.--Big Ore Body In Morning Star--The Robinson Lease Looking Well--The Brady Lease Is Not.

Yesterday the Acacia company sent out its checks to stockholders for the second quarterly dividend of fifteen thousand dollars.

It would have been wise to send to the stockholders at the same time a brief, clear, responsible statement—of the condition of the property. But none of the companies do that and the Acacia is therefore not an exception.

The condition of the property is on the whole favorable—exceedingly so—yet there are some unfavorable circumstances to report. The Brady lease is working but half force; the Wrockloff lease has not yet cut the ore body on the fourth level; the Banker's lease on the Morning Star have had to stop several days to fix their new hoisting plant.

These are all the unfavorable circumstances of the situation and when analyzed they are not very unfavorable.

The Brady lease has long been known to be operating at the woeful disadvantage of making two hoists of its ore. The present lay-off is partly to remedy this, and partly to decide on a plan of more systematic development.

It is reported by the company's manager, Dr. Chambers, as having at present the richest ore ever lifted from the lease, but the body of it is smaller than that which it has been breaking for the last three months.

The Wrockloff Lease.

It was expected that this lease would cut the great and rich ore body on the 400-foot level last Monday, but it has not yet cut it. This is the reason—Wrockloff had miscalculated the distance he would have to crosscut by 28 feet. A re-survey showed him his error. He now expects to cut it today (Sunday) or tomorrow. That is the worst to report from the Wrockloff lease.

The best is that the 300-foot level is more than holding its own—much more. The ore body is larger than was at first supposed—already 15 feet long and the breast still showing good ore. The significance of this will be realized when the great width and the high value of the ore is considered. This Wrockloff ore body is universally pronounced in camp the greatest find of the year in the district—that is the biggest body of high grade ore opened since New Year's. And this body should be cut on the fourth level in a day or two and in the fifth and sixth levels within 40 days. As to the sixth level, however, there has been a slight change of plan—it will be at a depth of 625 feet instead of 600 feet. This is to give a full stope on the great Free Coinage ore body which dips into the Wrockloff ground at 550 feet. This ore body has been worked up to the line in the Free Coinage and is a dead sure thing. It is also very rich—averages better than ten ounces.

The Robinson Lease.

Apparently the only thing that stands in the way of making a mine immediately of this lease is want of money to push development. Robinson hasn't the money, and has to go slowly and works but one shift. He seems, however, to be opening an ore body of great promise at the intersection of his vein with the main Burns dyke; just where it might be expected.

The Morning Star.

The Banker's lease on this claim has come to be regarded as rather a hoodoo outfit; but they are in a way to redeem their reputation now. They have come upon a great ore body. The width is said to be ten feet. The grade is low—three dollars—but the body is accompanied by a selvidge streak that runs $2000. Nothing, however, should be expected of this outfit till it has happened. They had no sooner cut this body of ore than it was found that the axle of their hoist was sprung and this occasioned a delay of four or five days. But as their shaft is down 425 feet and they believe they have the ore the whole of that depth a big output may be expected soon. This leasing company has spent a great deal of money and done some creditable mining, but their shilly-shallying has gone beyond all belief. It seems to be necessary for the local management to communicate with Pittsburg and get the consent of the directory whenever they need a box of candles or a bar of drill steel—however, no battle is lost till it is ended and they are still at work and with better promise of success at present than ever.

The Acacia stock has taken a big drop in the last week, but there seems to be no specific reason for it except the failure of Wrockloff to cut the ore on the fourth level when expected and the cause of that disappointment is precisely as stated.

MINING NOTES AROUND TOWN

The work on the Lucrative company's property has progressed finely since the newly organized company took matters in hand. A substantial new shaft house has been put up and will soon be ready for use, while the work of getting the machinery ready for operation has progressed well. The shaft, now down to a depth of 265 feet, is an incline affair, and will need to be straightened, and this will be completed as soon as possible, after which the straight shaft will be rapidly pushed to the 500-foot point. Mr. Kinney thinks that the ore in sight at present will more than defray the expense of the improvements now under way in getting the mine ready for operation.

ZOE SHIPPED FIFTY TONS OF ORE WORTH $2,500.

A shipment, which was marketed recently from the Zoe company's property on Beacon hill, consisted of 50 tons of ore, which, it is estimated, will return on an average of $50 worth of gold to the ton. It is stated that from now on these shipments from this property, another of Mr. Kinney's enterprises, will be a regular thing. The new shaft, which has just been put down, has been connected with the old workings and all is now ready for the wheels of production to turn.

MODOC M. & M. CO. PAID $5,000 YESTERDAY.

The regular monthly dividend of the Modoc Gold Mining and Milling company was paid yesterday. This is at the rate of 1 cent a share on the capitalization of 500,000 shares and amounts to $5,000. This company has been a regular dividend payer for some time and has now distributed a total of $195,000 to its stockholders. The mine is in excellent condition and there is every prospect that the 1 cent dividend can be maintained for a long time, and perhaps increased.

MARY M'KINNEY LEASE IS AGAIN IN ORE.

The lease of Fry and Burke on the Gold hill end of the Mary McKinney property is again in good ore at the depth of 400 feet. Since these lessees took hold of this ground they have been prosecuting considerable development work in the hope of opening up the shoot again from which former lessees made a good production, and they have just been successful. As soon as practicable they will begin breaking down ore and it is their intention to maintain a heavy production.

CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINES TOTAL DIVIDENDS IS $100,000.

The directors of the Consolidated Gold Mines company met in Victor yesterday and declared the regular monthly dividend of 1 cent a share on the total capitalization of 1,000,000 shares. The $10,000 will be paid to stockholders of record of Sept. 20, on the 25th of this month. The payment of this dividend will bring the total distribution of this company up to an even $100,000, one-tenth of the capitalization of the company.

GOLD COIN HAS DECLARED ITS DIVIDEND.

The directors of the Gold Coin Gold Mining company met in Victor yesterday afternoon, and declared the regular monthly dividend. This is at the rate of 2 cents per share on the 1,000,000 shares, at which the company is capitalized, and amounts to $20,000. When this dividend is paid to stockholders of record of September 20 on the 25th inst., the company will have distributed a total of $540,000.

ACACIA HAS PAID ITS SECOND DIVIDEND.

The second quarterly dividend of the Acacia Gold Mining company was paid yesterday, the rate being 1 cent a share on the 1,500,000 shares of the company, amounting to $15,000. This company has now distributed $30,000 in dividends and promises to continue the $15,000 quarterly disbursement indefinitely.

CRIPPLE MINING ITEMS

Victor Property Attached--Work Will Be Resumed on Ajax Property--Mining Matters of Record.

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, Sept. 15.—The Victor G. M. Co. was levied upon this morning by the sheriff to satisfy a judgment of $151,000, obtained some time ago by David H. Moffatt. The levy was made against all of the machinery, buildings and other surface and underground equipment belonging to the company and the following lodes: the Victor, the Victor No. 2, the Victor No. 3, the Little Joe, the Panther and the Panther No. 2.

F. T. Osgood, leasing on the main workings of the Victor, has not been molested in his work and probably will not be. He is shipping a large amount of low grade ore, the royalties on which are worth considerable.

The Victor company has paid dividends of $1,150,000, all of which has come from the proceeds of the ore shipped. The ore reserves, however, are almost worked out and as a deep mining proposition the mine has not been a great success. Eastern and European stockholders, who at one time owned a control in the company, have become discouraged and many of them have sold out. Victor shares can be bought in Boston for $1, denoting the valuation of $200,000 for the property. After the property is sold the company will have nine months in which to redeem it.

Work on Ajax.

Work has been resumed on the Ajax claim of the Gold Hill G. M. Co., after a suspension of two days. The north crosscut has reached the vein which was cut in the shaft more than a month ago, and the vein was re-encountered a few days ago, when work was discontinued. It is three feet wide and carries from one to two and one-quarter ounces. South of the shaft work continues on the new vein. This vein is not pay ore but there is two feet of it that averages three-quarters of an ounce. Improvement, however, in the values have been gradual ever since the crosscut into the body.

Ida May.

Work will be resumed next Monday morning on the Ida May claim of the Estella G. M. Co. Work has been suspended on this property for several months. Men will be put into the main workings and trenching will also be done on the property north of the shaft and higher on the hill. The lessees expect to uncover the Nickel Plate vein with very little work. The shaft will be continued to the 200 foot point when crosscuts will be driven both ways. One shift will be employed until work has been finished on the shaft. As soon as the crosscut can be started two shifts will be employed.

Charles H. Edgecombe began a suit today against the Sleepy Hollow G. M. Co. and others in which he states that he is the rightful owner of the undivided three-fourths interest in the Moon Stone, the Guenevere and Vermont claims and alleges that two of the defendants, James Fox and L. W. Davis, deeded the three-fourths interest to him January 3, 1899, and three months later deeded it to the defendant company. He asks the court to give him a clear title for the property.

The Virginia Mining Con. G. M. Co. today filed with the county recorder a certificate of full paid up stock. It states that all the million shares for which the company is capitalized have been issued in consideration of the company's property.

The Gazette is the Only Newspaper in the State with Its Own Private Wire to the Colorado Springs Mining Stock Exchange.

THE COLORADO SPRINGS MINING STOCK EXCHANGE

Colorado Springs, Sept. 15.—The volume of business transacted on the Colorado Springs mining exchange this morning (and there was only one call held as is usual on Saturday) was not quite so heavy as it has been lately, but so far as the strength of the market is concerned it seems to be better than it was on either of the calls yesterday, and the upward tendency manifested by scattering stocks on the two previous calls was observed more generally this morning. Whether or not the bottom has yet been reached or not is still a subject of some speculation among the brokers; but the general opinion seems to be that the market will be subject to more or less fluctuation until the presidential contest is settled; and that it cannot be predicted whether stocks will decline further than they have during any break before that time or not. It would seem that the lower prices which ruled on several of the calls this week must nearly touch the lowest mark, and many of the stocks seem to be at their very lowest at present; but there are bears on the market, and it is not unlikely that they will make the most of the uncertain conditions which many people insist accompany the present presidential election. When the election is decided, the brokers are almost of one mind that Cripple Creek stocks will rapidly recover to their proper price.

The trading during the week is tabulated below:

ZOE and LUCRATIVE

Latest Information

ZOE

The surface improvements on the Zoe mine are completed. These consist of a new shaft house and plant of machinery, and a new ore house. The new compartment shaft is timbered to below the third level and is rapidly nearing completion.

We are breaking ore in all the levels, and sinking the shaft on ore. We have made our initial shipment of about 50 tons which will run about $50 per ton, and the mine will make regular shipments from this date.

LUCRATIVE

The new shaft house and ore house on the Lucrative mine are more than half finished, and will be completed within one week. Work in the mine is being pushed by a force of 20 men. The drifts on both veins are being rapidly extended, and we are taking out rich ore. We will make a shipment of several cars during the following week that we expect to net about $50 per ton. By the time the main shaft is retimbered we will have the mine in shape to maintain regular shipments.

For sure profits I advise the purchase of Zoe and Lucrative stocks.

EASTERN MARKETS

New York Stocks

New York, Sept. 15.—The same factors which caused the break in prices in yesterday afternoon's stock market continued in force today and more business was done during the two hours of the Saturday short session than on any full day for months. Liquidation was plainly in evidence and the bear operators added their selling to the burden of the market in the confidence that lower prices would enable them to cover at a profit, the declines which they brought about in this way uncovered many stop loss orders which had been placed in the market as a precautionary measure by recent speculative buyers. The points of weakness made it evident that the liquidation was largely of speculative accounts. The principal railroad stocks are down from 1 to 1⅝, the coalers, grangers, Pacifics and trunk lines being the principal sufferers. The steel stocks and the leading specialties show the same range of losses. The bear traders covered in some stocks but in others the selling continued in large volume to the close, which was active and weak. The decreased cash reserves of $4,964,200, came close to the preliminary estimates, showing that the national bank notes have not taken the place of legal tenders to any extent in the outward movement.

Chicago Grain.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—The crowd was rather short at [illegible]

deals and Liverpool showed an advance of ¼d in place of the decline which had been expected in view of the weakness here the previous session, then made a rush to cover. The demand was further stimulated and the supply decreased by more wet weather in the northwest accompanied by indications of frost and snow. Commission houses sold freely at the advance but the offerings were well taken and the close was strong, October 1 cent higher at 76⅝. There was a fair cash demand here and that was also a help towards the end.

Corn was dull and easy.

Oats were dull and neglected.

Provisions were quiet.

The London Market.

New York, Sept. 15.—Commercial Advertiser's London financial cablegram: The markets here are stagnant and dull today on the China and money outlook, discounts having risen to the German loan and the announcement of a further issue of $2,000,000 treasury bills authorized by the war loan act. Americans were quite neglected and inclined to droop below parity.

Tintos were firm and Anacondas weak.

Silver was firm though the Calcutta forward price was only 71½.

Where Did That Headache Go?

If there was no cure for that headache there would be some reason for tolerating it. But there is a cure.

It is safe, swift, sure. It goes right to the throbbing, tearing pain and soothes it and quiets it until in a few minutes you can straighten up and say: "Where did that headache go?" Never mind. It is gone. It will not trouble you again soon.

And then the medicine is so easy to take—no bad smell, no big capsule to swallow. It is just a little tasteless, safe wafer, and after it is moistened it slips down your throat as easy as an oyster.

People who don't enjoy having headache ought to keep a box in the house all the time. The name? "Instant Headache Cure."

We sell it.
